Yank Counterattack Crushes Red Drive; D.C., Virginia Military Units Called Up

34 Killed As National Guard Plane Falls, Burns

S. C. Crash Victims Are Tennesseeans In Airlift Returning From Maneuvers

Myrtle Beach, S. C., July 23 (AP).—A big Air Force transport carrying National Guardsmen from war games crashed and burned near here today. Thirty-four men were killed.

Minutes after the C-46 climbed from the Municipal Airport here en route to Nashville, it plunged into a pine thicket and burst into flames.

The towering, gasoline-fed fire kept rescuers at a distance and they were helpless as they watched the cremation of the Tennessee Air National Guardsmen passengers and Air Force crew from Miami.

"It was burning to beat hell," said George Hux, Conway, S. C., undertaker who went to the scene in an ambulance. "I didn't see any need for me to stay there. There were no survivors. Everybody is being burned to a crisp."

Remains Are White Hot

It was hours later before Air Force men could approach the white hot remains.

Debris was scattered over a wide area.

"You couldn't tell it was a plane," reported one of the first on the scene. "Parts were blown hundreds of yards."

Capt. P. S. Wood of the Shaw (S. C.) Field public information office said the plane carried 30 passengers and three crewmen. Capt. Andrew J. Wood, pulic information officer of the 435th Troop Crrier Wing Reserve stationed at Miami, said the transport had a crew of four.

[The Guardsmen victims all were from Nashville or the Nashville area, most of them in their late teens or early twenties.—Editor's Note.]

Returning From Maneuvers

The Nashville Guardsmen were members of the 105th Fighter Squadron, a part of the 118th Fighter Group. Along with Air National Guardsmen from several other States, the Nashville squadron had been participating for two weeks in maneuvers at this South Carolina coastal resort.

Nine transports from the Miami Reserve Wing flew to Myrtle Beach yesterday to take Guardsmen home.

The doomed ship took off about 10:30 a. m., and headed for Nashville. About half way to Conway, 14 miles northwest of here, it plummeted to earth.

Train Wrecked Deliberately, Frisco Agent Says

Holland, Mo., July 23 (AP).—Someone deliberately wrecked a northbound Frisco passenger train near here early today, killing the engineer, seriously scalding the fireman and slightly injuring 12 passengers, the carrier's special agent said tonight.

E. H. Wilson reported that the lock of a switch had been cut—apparently by sawing—and that a signal light which would have shown red had been broken.

He said the open switch sent the Memphis-to-St. Louis Memphian, traveling at about 50 miles an hour, into a side track.

Taft Asks Pay-as-We-Go Taxes For 'Semi-Military' Economy

O'Mahoney

Taft

. . . Ask excess-profits levy

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) said yesterday the Russian threat is clamping a "semi-military" condition on the United States at an extra cost of 10 billion dollars to 20 billion dollars a year—and the end cannot be foreseen.

So we should pay all costs as we go, he said, slapping the taxes on everybody immediately.

It would make "all-out controls" unnecessary at this time by draining off excess buying power, he reasoned.

The Senate GOP Policy Committee chairman's appraisal of the new world situation added to pressure already building up in Congress for quick and drastic tax boosts to carry the defense load and hold down inflation.

The chairmen of tax-writing committees in both houses of Congress have said they do not expect tax action until late fall or January.

Taft, in a broadcast (Station WINX) with other lawmakers, declared:

"We are moving into a new 'normal' condition in which about 20 percent of our national production will be devoted to sustaining partial mobilization." (President Truman has estimated current national output at nearly 270 billion dollars a year.)

Observing that the condition may last "perhaps 10 or 15 years," Taft said it is something "which we must accept as permanent, for we don't know when the Russians are going to strike."

"An additional 10 to 15 billions a year over the present level of 13 billions for military, plus perhaps some additions for foreign aid, will take the budget up from

Warplane Output May Be Doubled

Aircraft Industry Says Its Reservists Must Be Deferred If Goals Are Met

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

President Truman's 10-billion-dollar arms expansion program is expected to more than double the currently planned warplane orders for this year—providing some five billion dollars for new aircraft in fiscal '51.

Aircraft industry officials reporting this yesterday, however, said the job cannot be done unless reservists employed in the Nation's 15 airframe and 5 aircraft engine companies are deferred from call.

Emphasis on Tactical Planes

Industry sources reported that the plane expansion program outlined to company representatives last week at the Pentagon provides for an additional 2.3 billion above the 2.3 billion dollars carried in the 1951 appropriation bill.

The latter calls for building about 2372 new Air Force and Navy planes. If the spending is doubled, the number of planes ordered may be increased, as the present emphasis is believed to be on a tactical aircraft—land and carrier planes—rather than heavy bombers.

The aircraft industry has made representation to the Department of Defense for deferment of their key employes from reserve calls. A recent survey made by the companies showed that as many as 25 percent of their engineering forces were reservists. The others had at least 12 percent reservists. Calling up of these people would play havoc with plans for expanding plane production, officials said.

No Assurances Given

While these facts have been placed before Pentagon chiefs, no assurances have as yet been received that the reservists will be deferred, industry sources declared.

While the indicated plane production plan will step up output, it is far short of the early World War II enlargement. President Roosevelt's decision to go all out for a 50,000 annual plane production rate in May 1940 took 24 months to achieve. It is estimated that it would now take 34 months to build 50,000 planes a year on an unlimited expansion program. Nothing like this is being planned.

370th Radar Maintenance Federalized

First D. C. Outfit To Be Summoned; Va. Guard, Reserve Units Get the Word

(Pictures on Page B-1)

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

The 370th Signal Radar Maintenance Unit yesterday became the first District National Guard unit to be called to Federal service in the Korean crisis.

The unit, whose members service artillery sighting mechanisms, has been ordered to report for active duty August 14, three weeks from today.

Virginia Units Called

In Virginia, Adjutant-General S. Gardner Waller received orders alerting the two National Guard units—the 710th Anti-Aircraft Battery and the 224th Anti-Aircraft Headquarters and Headquarters Group. Waller said the groups would report for active duty August 14.

Two Army Organized Reserve units in Virginia also were alerted—the 780th Field Artillery Bn., with headquarters at Roanoke; and the 972d Quartermaster Laundry Co., at Norfolk.

The call was announced by a spokesman for the District National Guard.

The news came to members of the unit a few minutes after they arrived at the District Guard Armory in the convoy of 1200 District Guardsmen returning from their two-week annual encampment at Fort Miles and Bethany Beach, Del.

The 370th is one of the first National Guard units to be called up.

An announcement Friday said the Army was "in the process" of progressively calling nondivisional elements of both National Guard and Reserves to active duty as the need arises and "facilities for their reception and training can be provided."

Strength Kept Secret

Officers said they were not authorized to reveal the strength or equipment of the 370th, but obviously it is a small unit. Since before World War II, it has been part of the 260th Anti-Aircraft Artillery Group of the District Guard.

Commanding the unit, which is at full strength, is Warrant Officer (j.g.) Fred G. Kahlert of 3900 Northampton st. nw., who left the Army about a year ago after eight years in the Signal Corps.

A radio mechanic since he returned to civilian life, Kahlert said yesterday he had thought he might be back in the Army some time, but "not quite so quick." With the 260th in 1941, he served in Hawaii during the war and in Yokohama with the occupation forces.

Fellow members of the District Guard, who returned from training, sun-tanned and tired, after an extensive two-week program, naturally had but one topic in barracks and chow-line rag-chewing, they reported.

"The slogan up there," said Recruit Joseph Mulcahy, 19, of 213 3d st. se., was: "There's a Korea in the Army for You."

Reds Push 80 Miles To Take Kwangju On the West, 40 miles From South Coast

BULLETIN

Eighth U. S. Army Headquarters in Korea, Monday, uly 24 (AP). ters in Korea, Monday, July 24 (AP). An American counterattack today drove back the first Red Taejon-Yongdong highway line.

At least eight tanks, which the Reds brought across the river before the American lines, were knocked out—two today and six yesterday.

Associated Press Correspondent O. H. P. King reported a division commander said Red guerilla pressure was developing in another sector of the American front. This guerilla action by the Reds started shortly after a frontal attack by Red infantry.

One American tank was hit by an armor-piercing shell and put out of action, said King. The tank gunner was killed. Other crewmen were wounded.

While F-80 and F-51 planes supplied steady ground-support strikes, American artillery continued its steady fire. American gunfire was lighter than yesterday, however, when a Red tank thrust was stopped cold.

The tanks moved yesterday without infantry support. With two tanks stopped today after crossing the river, the first Red infantry attack was made without a tank spearhead. This has been the usual successful Red tactic in their steady drive against Americans from Osan across the Kum river and through Taejon.

The American counterattack regained more ground than was lost and the Reds suffered severe losses on the Taejon-Yongdong highway front, King added.

But a short time later Red guerillas started an attack on another American sector. A division commander said the Americans on that sector were "taking care of the situation," King said.

North Korean forces, making a wide sweep down the West Coast, captured Kwangju about 80 miles southwest of Taejon Sunday, an Eighth Army spokesman said today.

This Red thrust placed the Communists within 40 miles of the South Coast and astride the main railway and highway that swings northeast to a point behind advanced American positions on the Western front.

Tokyo, (Monday) July 24 (AP).—Allied aircraft roared back into the flaming western front to help American ground forces halt a strong North Korean armored thrust east of Taejon Sunday.

United States and Australian fighter pilots reported they shot up 18 Red tanks in close ground support sweeps in clearing weather. These would include some of 10 to 20 tanks previously reported knocked out in field dispatches in the battle about 15 miles east of Taejon.

American bazooka teams and artillery combined with the low-flying planes in meeting the Communist armored thrust against the new defense lines recently reinforced by troops of the famed U. S. First Cavalry Division. Air and ground tank kills had not yet been segregated.

The general commanding the fresh troops of the dismounted United States First Cavalry Division in the defense line told AP Correspondent O. H. P. King he was confident the Sunday afternoon's work would prove "a turning point in this war."

[The United Press reported the North Koreans opened a heavy barrage of mortar and artillery fire on the Taejon front at 1 a. m. Monday and kept it going steadily through the night. The Americans grimly held their frontline positions in expectation of a new assault.—Editor's note.]

Truman Hears Pastor Assess U. S. War Role

Dr. Pruden Says Reds Fail to Recognize Spiritual Truths

By Connie Zatkovich
Post Reporter

The threatening world situation was discussed in Washington sermons yesterday.

President Truman and his daughter Margaret heard the Rev. Dr. Edward H. Pruden at First Baptist Church, 16th and O sts. nw., call upon Christians to approach the critical situation with a sense of "shared guilt."

The White House reported that the President thought the sermon "excellent and timely."

Dr. Pruden quoted from James, Chapter 4, 1st verse:

"From whence came wars among you? Come they not even of your passions which struggle within you?"

"Wars do not start in foreign offices but in hearts of individuals," he commented.

Communism fails to recognize two basic spiritual truths—the sovereignty of God and the brotherhood of man, Dr. Pruden declared. But if we are honest, he said, we must admit that these truths do not find complete expression in ourselves and in such a situation it is "rather difficult for us to assume the responsibility of moral leadership for the rest of the world."

He called upon Christians to work unceasingly for peace through the "United Nations, religious groups and other international bodies."

At the National Presbyterian Church, a former pastor, the Rev. Dr. Albert J. McCartney, spoke from his old pulpit for the first time in five years. He compared the victory of Israel over Sisera with the present-day crisis, saying: "We are engaged now in a controversy with Communism in Korea and we tremble lest the steps we have taken might draw the whole world into mutual slaughter and devastation."

The Rev. Dr. Harry N. Holmes of New York City, preaching as guest at the Foundry Methodist Church, 16th and P sts. nw., quoted Carl Sandburg's "Remembrance Rock" in his address.

"No nation ever fell, never to rise again, unless it forgot the things from which it came," he said.

Red Casualties Estimated as High as 18,000

Pentagon Officer Speculates on Drain On Men and Supplies

By The Associated Press

The North Korean Red army has suffered between 14,000 and 18,000 casualties since it started the invasion of South Korea, a Defense Department briefing officer estimated yesterday.

He said no breakdown of the number of killed, wounded and captured could be made.

The number of replacements the Communist forces have been able to get to offset losses is not known, the officer said, then commented:

"If they have had that many casualties and have committed the greater part of their ground forces, they haven't got much reserve left."

He declined to guess whether the North Koreans were counting on troops from across the border in Manchuria for replacements.

The briefing officer noted a reference in a recent communique to an attack on "horse-drawn" artillery pieces used by the North Korean army. He said that if a modern army has anything else to use it doesn't use horse-drawn equipment. His indication was that the North Koreans may be running out of some modern equipment.

Headless, Legless Body Found in Cleveland Yard

Cleveland, July 23 (AP).—The legs of a headless male body discovered yesterday in a storage yard had been severed by a sharp instrument, Coroner Samuel R. Gerber said today.

The coroner declined to speculate on the possibility of the case being another "torso murder." None of the 12 murders a dozen years ago ever was solved, although a 25-year-old immigrant told police he killed one of the victims. He hanged himself in jail before being brought to trial.

All the "torso" victims had been beheaded.

Gerber listed the latest case as a "probable homicide" and said his examination indicated the same knife had been used to behead the unidentified victim and sever the legs.

Some Marine Reserve Squadrons Called Up

The Marine Corps announced yesterday that "certain (aviation) squadrons of the organized Marine Corps Reserve are being called to active duty."

However, the announcement said, "this does not constitute an increase in the number of squadrons in the regular service but rather will bring certain existing squardons up to full strength."

This apparently means that the reserve units will be broken up and their personnel assigned to fill out under-strength regular outfits.

Heads North From Taejon

Virginia GI Affects 90-Yr. Gait To Save Self Behind Red Line

By Robert C. Miller

With American Forces at the Taejon Front (Monday) July 24 (U.P.).—The escape route for Americans trapped in burning Taejon lay to the south, but Pfc. Charles Ferguson, of Narrows, Va., went north behind the Communist lines and saved his life.

Ferguson told today how he got lost and strolled calmly the wrong way, deep behind enemy lines, even pausing to eat a watermelon along the road.

He parlayed a lent compass, a straw hat, a Korean friend—and the watermelon—into an indefinite extension of his 21 years.

Ferguson was "holding the line" in Taejon last Thursday when it started. His retreating convoy was shelled heavily as it attempted to fight its way out of the town.

His truck was wrecked, forcing Ferguson and his three buddies to get out and walk.

"I was the only man who had a compass," the good-looking Virginian explained. "So I gave it to my squad leader.

"However, we became separated after dark and all of a sudden I was all alone behind the enemy lines and lost. I just headed into the mountains and walked all night trying to put as much distance between me and burning Taejon as possible."

By Friday morning, Ferguson had succeeded in putting several miles between him and Taejon. But he had traveled north instead of south and was deep in the North Korean rear.

"I started to climb a mountan but it was filled with Communist soldiers clambering all over it," he said. "I just boldly walked on down to a village and nobody paid any attention to me.

"I guess they never expected to see an American that far back and took me for a Communist."

Footsore and exhausted, the infantryman created quite a stir among the villagers. They tried to shoo him off for fear his presence would get them in trouble.

"Just when things looked blackest," Ferguson said, "a youngster about 18 came up and said 'Hello, Joe—I speak English. Come over to my house and I will fix you 'up.'"

The South Korean took the GI inside his thatched house. He outfitted him with a big Korean straw hat, white trousers, white vest and a tightfitting pair of native shoes.

He was also given a typical Korean pack in which he rolled his

B-29s in Action

Key Enemy Targets Hit By Bombers

Tokyo (Monday) July 24 (AP).—Allied aircraft struck "heavy blows" on the enemy's key targets in North Korea yesterday as good weather permitted increased aerial assaults.

The targets included rail and highway bridges, industrial installations, vehicles and military supply depots.

American and Australian Air Force planes, flying approximately 165 combat sorties, attacked in areas ranging from Pyongyang south to the battle fronts.

A communique issued by the Far East Air Force said B-29's struck again at industrial targets near Pyongyang.

The communique said 130 tons of bombs were dropped on that target.

The bombing of Pyongyang was done through clouds. The airmen used radar to find their targets there.

Fighters concentrated their strafing attacks around Taejon and Pyongtaek, about 25 miles to the north. They hit as hard other towns in the central sector, including Chungju, Punggi and Koesan.

Fighter pilots reported getting 10 tanks, 27 trucks, 22 vehicles, 37 railroad cars and one locomotive.

The communique said five warehouses were damaged by rocket fire and military installations in the Chungju area were stafed in low level sweeps.

No North Korean aircraft were encountered during the day and all aircraft returned without incident, the communique said.

FEAF bomber command Superforts hit a railroad and road junction at Chungju with excellent results, said the communique.

St. Charles, Va., July 23 (AP).—Jim Dowell, 60, a Southern Railroad brakeman, said the whole thing gave him "the weak trembles."

The Negro railroader, a 10-car coal train, a 16-month-old baby and baby's frantic young mother all reached the same point on the tracks at about the same time Friday. But moments earlier——

There was Dowell on the rear platform of the coal train caboose backing down a steep slope from the Monarch Mines here in Virginia's mountainous southwest. The weight of nine loaded coal cars sent it along at gathering speed. The brakeman glanced down the tracks and froze.

Arlington Man Found Slain In Wooded Fairfax Section

Curiosity led to the discovery of a bullet-riddled body in Fairfax County woods yesterday morning, and coincidence brought about the arrest a short time later of a blood-spattered suspect in the case, police said.

Dead—three bullet wounds in his body—is James Harris, 43, of 1731 S. 12th st., Arlington.

Charged with murder was Eugene Crumpton, 38, of Chicago, an employe of the New York Central System railroad. Bond was set at $50,000 last night for his appearance at 10 a. m. Wednesday in Fairfax County Court.

Crumpton steadily denied that he shot Harris, police said.

Detectives reported his clothes and the front seat of his car were stained with blood. A .38 caliber revolver with three empty chambers was found in the auto, they said.

The suspicion-tinged curiosity that led to the finding of Harris' body was shared by two men, Alexander Vaughn and William S. Smallwood, neighbors on Rugsby rd., off Route 1 in Fairfax County, 5 miles west of Fairfax. Pender, Va., is the nearest community.

Vaughn saw the car, he said, as he drove toward his home along Rugby rd. He said he became curious first, because Rugby rd. dead-ends just beyond his house, and second, because the driver was

Vanished on Straggler Hunt

Gen. Dean Got Out of Taejon Unharmed, His Aide Reports

Advanced American Command Post in Korea, July 23 (AP).—Maj. Gen. William F. Dean got out of flaming Taejon unharmed, but disappeared on his way to American lines to hunt for other stragglers from his gallant Twenty-fourth Division.

He is still missing, but hopes for his safe return rose when word of his escape from Taejon was brought here today by his aide, Lieut. Arthur Clarke, of Boone, Iowa.

Clarke led a dozen men from the abandoned city into camp Sunday noon with word that he last saw the red-headed, fighting general in the mountains outside Taejon Friday. Up to that time, at least, he had not been wounded as was reported earlier.

Clarke said he was with the 50-year-old Dean on a mountainside just outside Taejon. Dean left the group to go down to a river to look for more of his men.

"You can wait for me," the general said.

The 28-year-old lieutenant said he waited for two hours, then led his party on. He said he thought that was what the general wanted.

General Dean led the little party out of Taejon Thursday evening after spending most of the day hunting down Red tanks. Once

Yanks Kill 400, Smash Four Tanks

With the United States Twenty-fifth Division, Korea, July 23 (U.P.). Artillerymen of the Twenty-fifth Infantry Division destroyed four North Korean tanks and killed an estimated 400 enemy infantrymen today in throwing back an attack on the Chungju-Hamchang-Kunchon hwy.

Allied planes knocked out one tank and an armored car to make a total of six enemy armored vehicles destroyed.

The Communists attacked down the north-south highway leading to Kumchon, railroad and highway junction on the supply line from the big base in Pusan in southeastern Korea.

Five enemy tanks came down the road, with enemy infantry trucks following. Four of the tanks were destroyed along with several truckloads of the infantrymen. Three trucks were destroyed.

Tonight, a United States infantry unit which had been trapped for 36 hours behind the enemy lines by a tank-artillery force managed to disengage itself and get back safely.

The Americans were surrounded on three sides by the enemy, and a rain-swelled river was at their backs.

They got away, in the end, by swimming the river. They had to leave behind all their heavy equipment and a few wounded. But a group of volunteers swam back across the river and brought back their wounded buddies.

The North Korean force which trapped the Americans had compelled a unit of the Twenty-fifth Division to pull back to better prepared positions northwest of Sangju.

Sangju is 11 miles south of Hamchang, 16 miles north of Kumchow and 40 miles east of Taejon.

The central front was relatively quiet tonight. A battery of North Korean artillery sporadically shelled a road in the American sector northwest of Sangju but did no great damage.

Tokyo, July 21 (AP).—Eager young Americans who have been flying F-80 jets in rocket and strafing attacks on North Korean Communists are high in their praise of the swift Shooting Stars.

They should know. Operating from bases in Japan, they've been screaming down on Red troop concentrations, blasting tanks, trucks and military equipment; helping Allied planes rule the Korean skies since the war began.

They've ranged over Korea from daylight to dark under all kinds of flying conditions. The Russian-built Yak-3 fighters have proved no match for the F-80.

Listen to Lieut. Robert A. Coffin of Indianapolis tell about the Yak he knocked out of the sky:

"I was cruising around on the deck (at a low altitude) looking for tanks, when I heard some of our bombers call for cover. Two Yaks were after them.

Got Yak on First Burst

"They were 20 miles away, and high, but when I poured on the coal the distance between us folded like an accordion. I got the Yak on the first burst, coming straight in from behind. The other Yak didn't stay around to argue. I'm plenty satisfied with what the F-80 will do—I've got proof.

Lieut. Albert B. Works, of Dallas, Tex., who flew B-29 Superfortresses during World War II, has two tanks, five trucks and a warehouse chalked up in his Shooting Star box score.

"It's a long way from four engines to one jet pipe," Works says, "but I'm a happy man since I've made the switch. The 80 is my baby."

Capt. William Locke of Enfield, N. C., picked up a Distinguished Flying Cross and Air Medal with Clusters flying F-47s over France in World War II. (The F-47 is the Thunderbolt fighter, then known as a P-47.)

"As much as I loved the old Thunderbolt, it's not even a scratch on the pants of an F-80," as Locke sees it. "I've added three tanks to my score, under conditions where I'm convinced I couldn't have got them except with a jet."

Performs Like a Dream

First Lieut. Robert B. Eager of Belmar, N. J., flew back from his twelfth jet mission over Korea to say:

"I only wish that this airplane had the range to stay up all day. She performs like a dream."

Eager flew 23 missions with the Eighth Fighter Group during the war against Japan.

The testimony of the jet pilots added to the confidence in the F-80 expressed last week by Lieut. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, commander of the Far East Air Forces.

Defending the Shooting Star against its critics, Stratemeyer said the F-80s had flown 70 percent of all Air Force combat sorties over Korea and accounted for 85 percent of North Korean vehicle and materiel losses.

Stratemeyer said probably the only type of combat mission the F-80 hasn't performed over Korea is high-altitude interception—the task for which it was designed.

War's Wives Keep Vigil At Japan Base

By Don Whitehead

En Route to Korea, July 23 (AP)—Death and dancing—sorrow and laughter. They go side by side in this strange war.

The contrast is poignant. It's like a vivid dream that isn't true—and yet it is true. It's like a page from the last war that no one wanted rewritten. The words are being scrawled again in this far part of the world.

Let me take you to two places near an American air base in Japan. American troops left this spot for combat less than four weeks ago. This also is where the superspeed jets take off for their rocket and strafing missions against the North Korean Reds.

First, let's go to a small hotel near the airfield. It's the temporary home of wives and children of officers in the Twenty-Fourth Infantry Division in Korea. The Twenty-Fourth is the outfit which has borne the major shock of the Red power drives toward the south.

A group of women were seated around a table. They were the wives sweating out the news from their men in combat.

"Bill's got a chance," one of them said. "If anybody gets out, he will."

She was talking of Maj. Gen. William F. Dean, commanding general of the Twenty-fourth who went into Taejon to help his GIs fight Red tanks. He was last seen Friday in the hills near Taejon rounding up the stragglers and lost troops and trying to get them back to the American lines.

A dark-haired young woman came into the room. She told the others, "Jim got through. He got back through the lines with some of his men."

One of the women said, "Thank God for that." She was tall, dark and sad-eyed.

I don't know who Jim was and it didn't seem right to break in on this little group, clinging together for strength, to ask his name. It was enough that Jim got back.

They tried to be casual and light. But there was an undercurrent of emotion and electric tension. Finally one of the women stood up. "I'm going to bed," she said. "Call me if there is any news."

Then another left and the little group began to break up slowly.

A few miles away an Air Force club was bright with lights. An orchestra played "Now Is the Time," "You Belong to My Heart" and othre sentimental melodies. Couples danced gaily and laughed into each others eyes. At the big bar, fliers and their wives touched glasses and laughed.

Tomorrow, perhaps, the young men would climb into their planes and roar off for another mission over Korea. But tonight the war was far away and everyone there was having fun.

I don't know which scene was the saddest or if either could mean much to anyone except members of the cast. However, an old sergeant who was winding up 27 years of Army life stood at the bar looking at the Twenty-fourth Division wives and he said:

"I run this hotel. Tomorrow some more of the wives are coming down here to stay. I am going to lock myself in my office, put up an off-limits sign and never come out again. This sort of thing is hard to take."

Legion Sounds Call to Drive For UMT Now

Indianapolis, July 23 (AP).—The American Legion called upon its 17,418 posts today to campaign for "immediate enactment of universal military training legislation."

George N. Craig of Brazil, Ind., Legion national commander, sounded the call in a speech before a special conference of Legion department commanders. The address was broadcast over CBS.

"Universal military training is the least expensive and most effective national security measure we can adopt," Craig said. "The cost of universal miiltary training can never break us. Its adoption will make us."

Craig also called for reduction of government expenditures other than those concerned with national security, and said the Legion would abandon its support of new pension and bonus laws for the present.

"The American Legion as of now throws overboard for the duration of the present crisis its advocacy of any new veterans' pension legislation," the commander said.

"Also for the duration, we shall support no bonus bills. And we shall ask no additional benefits or extensions of time under the GI Bill of Rights except to make them applicable to those now fighting your war in Korea."

Craig pointed out that adequately-trained soldiers have a better chance of survival in battle as well as making a more effective fighting force.

"The handwriting on the wall indicates that the invasion of Korea is but an item on the timetable of communism to destroy world peace," he said. ". . . Many of our brave American youths are falling and dying today in Korea . . . paying the fearful price of inadequate training and of insufficient weapons and supplies . . .

"Force is the only language an enemy of peace understands. From now on we must lead with strength."

Christening of the Dale Triplets Provides New Experience for Prince Georges Rector

Charles Del Vecchio—The Washington Post

'THREE OF A KIND'—Their godparents, Mr. and Mrs. James F. Watters, play happily with now-famous triplets, Sherry, John and Margaret Dale, after christening yesterday

The Rev. Raymond P. Black yesterday found he was repeating himself for good reason—it was the christening of the Dale triplets.

The occasion marked the first time the rector of Prince Georges Episcopal Church at Gaithersburg, Md., had ever baptized more than one of a kind.

The godparents, Mr. and Mrs. James F. Watters of Route 1, Silver Spring, bundled them one at a time—ladies first—into the minister's arms, while the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Dale, assisted with consedrable nervousness. An open house was held at the Dales' home later.

"Less was heard" from Sherry, John and Margaret than at a "normal single" ceremony, Mr. Black observed.

Much more has been heard about them since they were born prematurely at Montgomery County General Hospital, Sandy Spring, on May 13.

They are the only set of triplets ever born at the hospital, Mrs. Marion Green, superintendent of nurses, believes. Because the hospital's three incubators were already in use the babies had to be transferred to the Children's Hospital in Baltimore.

At birth, John Alfred weighed 4 pounds, 2 ounces; Margaret Jane, 3 pounds, 6 ounces, and Sherry Dale, 2 pounds, 15 ounces.

John was first born and first home. He moved in on the Dales, who live about 2 miles from Gaithersburg, on June 21, and now weighs about 9 pounds. On June 30 Margaret added her 6 pounds to the family. Just a few days ago, Sherry, weighing 6 pounds and gaining, was brought home from the hospital.

This makes the Dale family total seven children. Charles 14, Benjamin 13, Thomas 11, and Florence 10, "just couldn't believe it." Mr. Dale, an auto mechanic at H. B. Leary jr. & Co., 1612 U st. nw., said the "usual one" was all he expected.

Neither Mr. nor Mrs. Dale have twins or triplets in their family lines. Mrs. Dale herself is one of 10 children.

Census Bureau Starts Final Tabulation of U. S. Populace

By the United Press

The Census Bureau, which Saturday set the United States population at 150,520,000 persons, will begin work now on final tabulations. These must be in the hands of President Truman by December 1.

Mr. Truman, in turn, will submit the figures to Congress, probably in the first week of next year. The House will decide the new representation of the States.

If the House does not act within 15 days after Mr. Truman sends it the new figures, the representation will stay as it is.

The bureau's report indicated that States most likely to gain seats in the House are California, Florida, Maryland, Michigan, Texas and Washington. Most likely to lose seats are Arkansas, Illinois, Kansas, Mississippi, Missouri, New York, Oklahoma and Pennsylvania.

In general, a United Press survey showed that west coast States will gain at the expense of eastern, southern and midwestern States.

The constitutional reason for taking the census every decade is to make sure each State is fairly represented—according to its population—in the House.

The new population totals will not only change the number of representatives the states send to Congress, but also will change the number of the states' electoral votes for president and vice-president. Each state gets as many electoral votes as it has representatives and senators.

Besides juggling the seats within the total, the House also could change its total membreship if it wanted to, although this has not been done since 1850 when the membership was pegged at 435.

Department Puts U. S. 1949 Output at $255.5 Billion

The national output in 1949 was placed by the Commerce Department yesterday at $255,500,000,000—far below the current rate that President Truman last week estimated at "nearly" 270 billion dollars a year.

This production of goods and services last year, however, was only $3,500,000,000 below the 1948 high mark for a full year.

Department estimates show a $263,900,000,000 rate was attained in the first quarter of 1950, and President Truman's report indicated a second-quarter rise.

The department said the national income—"The sum of incomes accruing in production"—was 217 billion dollars in 1949 against $223,500,000,000 in 1948, the record full year to date.

U. S. Set to Demand Pact Arms Increases

London, July 23 (U.P.).—The United States is prepared to make strong demands for substantial boosts in the defense programs of the other Atlantic pact countries to match the new 10-billion-dollar American arms program.

The United States also is prepared to offer the possibility of a vastly increased foreign military aid program—maybe as much as an additional five billion dollars.

These facts were learned on the eve of the first meeting of the new Atlantic Council of Deputies here Tuesday.

Lagging Suspected

For a long time American officials haven't felt that many of their Atlantic partners were doing as much as they could in the defense field. There will be no threats or browbeating this time. But it is assumed that the Americans will make these things quite plain:

1. The United States is ready to launch an all-out rearmament program to guard against the possibility of another World War. It is putting itself on virtually a war footing with vastly increased arms expenditures, much higher taxes, controls over civilian production and removal of all conscription limits.

2. The United States recognizes the greater domestic economic problems of most of its Atlantic partners. But it also considers the Atlantic Pact a partnership—share and share alike.

3. The United States does not expect her western European partners, still in a precarious economic position, to move as fast or as far toward a complete war footing as itself. But it does expect early and substantial action by all to improve the military position of the entire area.

The whole problem of military strength will be the major issue before the Atlantic deputies when the American delegate, Charles Spofford, calls them to order Tuesday. Spofford is expected to be the permanent chairman.

Formed 2 Months Ago

It was more than two months ago that the Atlantic pact Foreign Ministers agreed to establish a deputies council to sit continuously and work on the Atlantic area's military and economic problems.

The deputies will try to decide immediately how to increase the military strength of the Atlantic community to face threats of aggression in the shortest possible time and without unduly aggravating the basic economy of the area.

The specific problems involve immediate steps that can be taken by America's Atlantic partners—calling up reserves, stepping up armament production, diverting more economic resources from civilian to military programs.

2 Million Strong

Party Vows 'No War,' Togliatti Says

Berlin, July 23 (U.P.).—Italian Communist leader Palmiro Togliatti pledged his two million followers to oppose any Western attempts to draw Italy into war.

Togliatti did not mention the Western allies directly, but said:

"We have not lost our enemies, who again today threaten our Fatherland and the peace. We are great patriots. We do not play the cards of war and civil war, but enemies who want to plunge Italy into new wars must reckon with us, the better part of the Italian people."

The Italian Communist chief was given an ovation by the 4000 delegates from 25 countries attending the Communist Party congress in the Soviet sector of Berlin.

Speaking in German, Togliatti said the Italian Communist Party had 2,100,000 members, in addition to 450,000 youths and 700,000 Socialists who supported it.

"I can assure you the forces of peace are stronger than those of war," he said.

He concluded with an expression of good will for the future success of the German Communist Party in gaining "the majority of the people in western Germany."

Just before Togliatti spoke, 1000 youths paraded into the meeting hall, each carrying a small bouquet of wild flowers.

With a precision reminiscent of the Nazi era, the youths suddenly held the flowers over their heads and waved them back and forth, cheering at the same time. Moments later, they switched the scene from a multicolored floral setting into a colorful blue by waving their neckties.

German Reds Buck Kremlin In New Party

Duesseldorf, Germany, July 23 (AP).—More than 100 ousted German Communist leaders who oppose the Kremlin's foreign policy line formed a new independent Communist Party here today.

In a secret conference they gathered around Josef Schappe, 51, former party leader who was ousted as a Titoist. Later Schappe told a news conference he expected "tens of thousands" of Communists dissatisfied with their leaders' submissiveness to the Kremlin to join the new independent party.

He said his party would still regard the Soviet Union as an "ideal and as the fatherland of the working class." But he added that West German Communism should not follow the foreign political line of Moscow but adapt itself to the "specific conditions in West Germany."

Schappe said the new party rejected the agreement of the Communist East German government to renounce all territories east of the Oder-Neisse line. The new party also condemns Russia's "prisoner of war" policy.

Union to Picket 'Scare Buyers' In Philadelphia

Philadelphia, July 23 (AP).—The Transport Workers Union (CIO) announced today it will establish picket lines in Philadelphia this week—not to win a strike, but to stop "scare buying" and hoarding of food and other commodities.

Andrew J. Kaelin, president of Local 234, said the pickets will be selected from the 3000 members of the 10,500-member union who are veterans of both world wars.

Chiang Hits Nationalist Clique In Party Committee Shakeup

Taipei, Formosa, July 2 (AP).—While his artillery on the outpost island of Quemcy fought a duel with Communist shore batteries, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek today ordered the most sweeping changes ever made in his Nationalist Party.

The reorganization is designed to put his political house in better shape for the struggle with communism.

The immediate battle with Chinese Communists was being fought by the Quemcy artillery. The long-range duel was a possible prelude to Red invasion of Quemcy, which lies just off the mainland near the Communist port of Amcy. It is 100 miles west of Formosa.

Communist artillery opened fire Saturday. As the Nationalist emplacements on Quency replied, Red shelling was intensified. The duel continued through the night and into today. It was the heaviest exchange of the China civil war since President Truman asked Chiang, on June 27, to halt operations against the Communist mainland.

Chiang's current overhauling of his party dissolved the central executive and central supervisory committees. He will replace them with a central reform committee and a central advisory committee. Chiang himself will head the reform committee—yet to be appointed.

A high Kuomintang official said the reforms would end the power of the "CC" clique and eliminate whatever influence is still held by T. V. Soong, brother of Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, and her banker brother in-law, H. H. Kung. Soong and Kung were once two of the most powerful men in China. Both are now in America.

The CC clique, long known for its intrigues, is led by two brothers—Chen Li-fu and Chen Kuo-fu.

In ordering the changes, Chiang said:

"We must make Formosa the base for national recovery, a vanguard for the struggle of the free peoples of Asia and a champion of world peace."

(Reports from Hongkong indicated another struggle between Nationalist and Communist China was being fought on a commercial front. The two governments were said to be bidding against each other in Hongkong markets to stockpile essential goods in the wake of the British ban on shipment of oil to Communist China.)

West Europe Seen Rejecting Closed And Union Shops

Nearly all top labor leaders in western Europe have rejected the idea of the closed shop and union shop, says a book just published by the Brookings Institution.

The author, Kurt Braun, says those leaders fear the closed shop would lead to government control and also fear that the unions might be weakened by compulsory inclusion of members not committed to their programs.

The closed shop is an arrangement under which an employer agrees that only members of a certain union can work in his plant. Under the union shop, the employer can hire anybody he wants, but each new worker must join the union after being hired.

Braun compares the goals of unions in the United States and western European countries.

One great difference, he says, is that leading European unions have rejected capitalism and have advocated socialism or some other form of planned economy, even communism. By contrast, prevailing union policy in the United States accepts the basic principles of capitalism.

Braun's book is "The Right to Organize and Its Limits."

Westinghouse Ready for Quick War Conversion

Pittsburgh, July 23 (AP).—Big Westinghouse Electric Corp. can start overnight to turn its 68 plants to full military production, President Gwilym A. Price said today.

Price said the plan was approved by the Munitions Board two years ago, adding:

"Our plants could begin conversion tomorrow to the production of more than 350 different military items or classes of items ranging from radar and related electronic equipment to secret and restricted devices developed since the last war."

Farouk's Cousin Injured

Milan, Italy, July 23 (U.P.).—Prince Mohamed Mounir, 20-year-old cousin of King Farouk of Egypt, and three other persons were seriously injured yesterday when the Prince smashed his auto into a parked truck on the Turin-Milan highway.

Denmark Taking Over U. S. Weather Base

Copenhagen, Denmark, July 23 (U.P.).—The small American "Bluie West Eight" weather base in Greenland will be taken over by Denmark, it was announced here today.

A Danish "flying fortress" already is stationed at the base, the Danish announcement said. Two Danish lieutenants, five enlisted men and two engineers will take it over officially later.

Negotiations between the United States and Denmark on turning over the base were completed some time ago.

Oslo Denies Abdication

Oslo, Norway, July 23 (U.P.).—The government denied reports published in London that King Haakon VII would abdicate on his eightieth birthday in 1952 in favor of Crown Prince Olav.

Auriol Urges Permanent Army of U. N.

Bar-le-Duc, France, July 23 (AP).—President Vincent Auriol today hailed United Nations action in Korea and called for permanent organization of an international army to fight aggression.

The French President told an audience here that "we hail the building, however late, of the international army so long demanded by France. She asks now a definite organization of that army as an element of order and security for all peoples."

Auriol said France will "seek and propose every solution which may, in the spirit of justice, halt the (Korean) conflict and prevent others from breaking out."

"But first of all," he added, "it is necessary to stop an aggressor who, by refusing mediation, has exposed himself to the stigma of the U. N. It is first necessary to check an invasion and an occupation."

It was the 65-year-old President's first public pronouncement on the Korean conflict and came during formal outdoor ceremonies honoring the memory of Raymond Poincare, France's World War I President.

Auriol said that amid present chaos and fears, there is only one hope—"to make the aggressor, whoever he is, understand that aggression does not pay any longer."

He should be made to understand, the President declared, "not only that freedom is always bound to win in the long run but that this time collective measures will be taken from the first day."

"Therefore," he added, "there is more benefit for any people to choose the road of peace and particularly the road of the U. N., which is still open, than to choose a fight in which it would find defeat and ruin.

"This is the reason why we feel happy that the U. N. did not give way this time before the blackmail of the 'fait acompli' (accomplished fact) and has pledged its will to insure respect for the given word and for world security . . . That is why, faithful to our international obligations, we placed a naval unit at the disposal of the U. N."

Navy Day

Russians Hail Red Navy as Invulnerable

By Henry Shapiro

Moscow, July 23 (U.P.).—Lieut. Gen. S. E. Zakharov of the coastal artillery said today in a Navy Day address that Soviet warships "are the fastest, the most invulnerable and have the greatest firing power in the world."

(Soviet Admiral Golovko, quoted by the newspaper Pravda, said the Soviet navy has been strengthened by "hundreds of new, first-class warships" in the last 10 years. The summary of the admiral's article was distributed in London by Tass.

(A Pravda editorial, broadcast by Radio Moscow, said Russian shipyards are going all out to "build new ships, quicker and better. Our people will create new warships and new bases for the navy.")

As the Soviet Union celebrated Navy Day with artillery salvoes, fireworks, regattas and demonstrations of water sports, Pravda published a photograph of American prisoners marching through the streets of Pyongyang.

In a three-column photograph, on Pravda's back page, the prisoners carried placards with these Korean language slogans:

"The struggle of the Korean people for unification is just" and "Cease immediately the armed intervention in Korea." The picture showed crowds lining the sidewalks to look at the Americans, still in battle uniforms.

Zakharov, the principal speaker at the naval day rally at Gorki Park, said the Soviet Navy is now stronger than before the war.

Adm. G. I. Levchenko, in Red Fleet, reported that the Soviet Navy is on summer maneuvers now.

The front pages of all publications were devoted exclusively to Navy Day, with Stalin's picture on the lefthand side and Naval Minister Admiral Ivan Yumashev's picture on the right.

Orators last night and today denounced "American aggression" in Korea and sounded the familiar slogan, "hands off." Zakharov, at Gorki Park, also condemned the "piratical behavior of the American Navy" in blocking the Korean coast and bombarding "peaceful towns."

"All honest people, including the broad masses of toilers in America itself, protest the impudent aggression of warmongers gone mad," Zakharov said.

New Locomotive Mark Tops All Since 1923

The Association of American Railroads said yesterday the rail industry installed more new locomotives during the first half of 1950 than in any corresponding period since 1923.

The six months installations totaled 1127—1122 diesel and 5 steam locomotives. New freight cars put into service totaled 12,795.

Brussels Tempers Cooling With King Back in Palace

Brussels, July 23 (NYHT)—Brussels began to lose the look of a city under seige today, with police and army a good deal less obstrusive and King Leopold III firmly installed in Laeken Palace.

The feeling is growing that "operation homecoming" was a success, although not an unqualified success. The Socialist Party and the trade union, although still repeating that action will be taken to force the King's abdication, privately deprecate the idea of a general strike.

Yesterday's demonstrations led to no violence, and were not repeated today. By Monday, with the holiday weeekend over, there may be a good many more Belgians in a mood to demonstrate, but at the same time the King by then will have been home for two full days and the matter will have lost a little of its urgency.

So far, the Belgium General Trade Federation, through which action will come, is marking time and showing no great signs of aggression. A morning communique said "the labor movement will not be victimized by provocation; it intends to remain the only master of its own tactics." The federation was talking bigger this time last week.

The government rushed Crown Prince Baudouin and his younger brother Prince Albert into action today. The two boys went into the Palais des Academies in Brussels to be present at the award of decoration to 12 Belgian heroes. No one objects to either prince, since the anti-Leopold battle is one that revolves about Leopold personally. As a result, the government was bold enough to eliminate police cordons and the court limousines were cheered by several thousands.

Everything at Steak!

By Albert Parchey Mesirow

THE gregarious nature of man finds a natural outlet in his age-old custom of dining in company. From lavish descriptions of Roman baccanalia to sparse mention of the Mohammedan custom of sharing a pinch of salt, history is replete with accounts of peoples of all sorts and conditions partaking their food together. Being a restaurateur with an eye to labor costs, I'm thankful that the day of the stuffed pheasant, roasted to a turn and then put back into his feathers for serving, is gone forever. But the glow I get from the sight of four or five people sitting at one of our tables, laughing and chatting happily over a good meal, is more than monetary. Everything is so "gemutlich" that good will overwhelms me, and I have to forceably restrain myself from pulling up a chair and joining them! At such moments, nothing is more disturbing than to hear a patron explain to a waiter that he "just dropped in for a quick bite." We do not serve "quick bites." "Quick biters" are not welcome here. Our business is to gratify healthy appetites in a congenial atmosphere. It's a good business, too. I hope yours is as spiritually rewarding!

My essay last week on a certain California wine brought an old, old query from an old, old friend. Said he, "How can the layman know whether or not the wine he orders is going to be good? Or must one make a career of studying vintages, grapes and localities to make sure of getting a sound glass of wine every time?" The answer to that, my friends, is as old as the question itself. Don't bother to look at the label. Don't trouble to check the vintage, if any. Just consider the sponsor. Is the owner of the establishment in which you are doing your purchasing . . . by the glass or by the case . . . a person of character and discernment, with a professional's knowledge of wines? Is he or she a person of integrity? If the answer is affirmative, order with confidence. If it is negative, leave the premises forthwith, and hie you to a place known favorably to you. In short, you don't have to know the wines. Just know the person who sells them! Parchey's location: 19th at K St. N.W.

No matter if it's sweet or dry,
If pressed from grapes red, white or blue;
Remember this, when wines you buy:
That wine is best that pleases you!

Our calling card tray reveals that among the new visitors to Parchey's have been Mr. R. W. Skiff, Mr. H. A. Trafton, Mrs. K. L. Long, Dr. and Mrs. Alfred E. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Humdisine and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Davis. Old friends who returned in recent weeks include Mrs. H. S. Casler, Miss Margaret Banner, Miss Mary F. Langley, Mrs. E. Ireland, Mr. B. J. Mills, Captain J. W. Bowers and Mr. Harry Diegler.

Chef Heller has asked me to report to our readers that the present crop of mushrooms, from which he makes the rich and flavorsome sauce for our filets mignon, is the finest he has seen in recent years. Brought here to our special order from Kennett Square, Pennsylvania, these snowy-white beauties are to me the personification of the phrase "the fruits of the good earth." As they are unpacked, the air becomes redolent with the fine, clean aroma of rich soil. The slender white columns on which the great, meaty caps are so delicately balanced look for all the world like the uprooted pillars to the portico of a fairy palace. And Chef Heller assures me that never has he known mushrooms to be so tender, so full of satisfying flavor and so perfectly suited to his mushroom sauce recipe! I must stop my scrivenning now to partake of this ambrosial delicacy. I wish you were here to join me. But come in the very day you read this, won't you? Our address, again, is 19th at K N.W.

Pay-as-We-Go Taxes Needed, Taft Says

around 40 billions a year to above 50 and perhaps to 60 billions," he went on.

"And since this is not a temporary condition but one that may continue indefinitely, we should tax the people for the whole cost."

All-out mobilization at a cost up to 150 billion dollars a year would be another thing, the Senator said, and it would not be "practical" to try to pay for it all at once.

Calls Requests Too Sweeping

Taft said some of President Truman's requested mobilization powers were too sweeping. That legislation comes up in congressional committees this week.

But Taft said "We must take drastic steps" adding: "I do not think the President should wait until after the election to tell the people what they face.

"He proposes all the industrial controls but leaves out all the things that might be unpopular before the election — consumer price controls, rationing and taxes.

"He's trying to keep the weight of this thing off the people until after the election. I think the people are ready to accept it."

The President has promised tax-boosting proposals later. He has said he will not hesitate to call for price control and rationing if they are needed.

"I agree with the President on credit controls, controls over strategic materials, but the President is asking controls so sweeping that he could tell every farmer how to run his farm, and regulate every part of our economic life," the Ohioan said. "This is not necessary at this time."

Agrees With Sparkman

Taft agreed with Senator Sparkman (D., Ala.), another participant in the broadcast, that the tax boosts should include an excess profits levy to take back the winnings of profiteers and discourage price gouging.

Both Senators also urged quick priorities on steel and other strategic materials.

Taft's call for quick and big tax increases backed up a similar demand voiced by Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), chairman of the Senate-House Economic Committee which has taken the same position.

"No one is wise enough to predict when the Communist attack in Korea may be overcome," O'Mahoney said in a statement yesterday.

"No one knows where Communist pressure will next assert itself . . . But everyone knows that unless the home front is speedily organized to provide economic preparedness for a struggle that may last years, the Communists will succeed."

Hearings Open Today

O'Mahoney, who has talked of a 10 percent additional tax on individuals and corporations, also urged a quick excess profits tax.

"It will be a great mistake to assume that additional controls placed in the hands of the President can be any sort of substitute for increased taxation," he said.

"Profiteering cannot be prevented, as I see it, by any of the provisions contained in the bill on which hearings begin Monday."

That bill, among other things, would give the President broad powers to allocate scarce materials, impose consumer credit and commodity speculation curbs, and grant loans to spur defense production.

Both the Senate and House Banking Committees start public hearings on it today. W. Stuart Symington, chairman of the National Security Resources Board, will testify before the Senate unit first and then go before the House group.

Airmen Blast at Reds' Tanks As Weather Clears, Smash 20

An American Air Base in Japan, July 23 (AP).—American and Australian planes, catching the North Koreans by surprise when the weather cleared suddenly, destroyed or damaged at least 20 enemy tanks today and took a heavy toll of other Communist weapons and installations.

Air Force F-80s, B-26 bombers and F-82 Mustangs flew 130 sorties during the day. Australian Mustangs also were in action.

A heavy cloud cover dissipated so quickly that the North Koreans were unable to carry out effectively their usual practice of hiding during daylight hours when the weather is clear.

American jet pilots and Australian fighter pilots reported that they had destroyed 6 enemy tanks and damaged 14.

The fast F-80 Shooting Star jets claimed destruction of four enemy tanks, seven trucks, one locomotive, 14 other vehicles and two buildings. They reported that 10 tanks, 20 trucks, eight other vehicles, 17 railroad cars and three buildings, probably warehouses, were damaged.

Australian Mustang pilots reported they destroyed two tanks and damaged four tanks and two bridges.

The B-26 bombers knocked out two bridges, damaged two more and shattered a road leading into Chechon on the Taejon front with 12 tons of bombs.

One F-82 Mustang plane dropped a napalm (fire) bomb on the fallen South Korean capital of Seoul and a B-26 blasted the Seoul railroad area. Both bombings were radar-controlled and results were not known immediately.

Most of today's air action centered on the area around Taejon, where United States ground troops were battling numerically superior Communist forces.

The Shooting Stars strafed troops north of Taejon and strafed one unidentified town, leaving it in flames. They also damaged bridges at Hwahori and in the Taejon area, hit buildings at Chungju and a railroad roundhouse and tunnel at Pyungyi.

In some areas, however, the North Koreans managed to take cover when the skies cleared quickly after three days of typhoon weather conditions.

Returning from sorties in the target area toward the coast west of Taejon, Col. Stanton T. Smith, jr., of Santiago, Tex., 34-year-old commander of the Forty-ninth Fighter Bomber Group, said he saw hardly any Communist troop movements and found only two trucks to strafe.

"It's the same old story," he said. "They move supplies into villages and hide them. Then the troops use them when they move forward. I saw people in civilian clothes, but few troops. There was nothing to use my rockets on."

Air Force Delays Waters Hearing

Richmond, Va., July 23 (AP).—Ninth Air Force headquarters said today it had postponed for a second time an efficiency board hearing to investigate the qualifications of Maj. Leland H. Waters, jr., to command the Virginia Air National Guard.

The Air Force said no new date for the hearing, tentatively scheduled for Monday, had been set.

Armored Spearhead of Reds Is Crushed

the Reds are believed to have suffered heavy troop losses from American shelling and strafing of their hideouts in villages and farm buildings.

First Cavalry patrols and observation planes spotted the daytime hiding places of hundreds of enemy troops and their vehicles.

American artillery promptly zeroed-in on the indicated targets in a continuous five-hour barrage.

Fifth Air Force Mustangs and F-80 jets struck and struck until darkness, in more than 20 missions. The planes also hit again at the railway yards in Red-held Taejon, where they had blown up an abandoned United States munitions train Friday.

All the day's fighting was at long range, with no major infantry contacts.

Four of the first six advancing Red tanks succeeded in crossing a shallow stream, but were caught and knocked out when they tried to hide in a nearby mud-walled village compound. Both planes and artillery participated.

An American artillery general who observed the action from a plane said the tanks clustered together, making a bigger target.

"Whoever was directing the movement of those tanks certainly was dumb," he commented.

The tank-busting action took place on the Taejon-Yongdong highway—a 27-mile winding road leading southeast and paralleled by a double-track railroad. It ended a lull following the fall of Taejon at midnight Thursday.

Some 95 miles eastward, where the First Cavalry Division had landed unopposed at the port of Pohang Wednesday, the North Koreans were bringing new pressure to bear. In a sudden attack, the Reds on Saturday recaptured the east coast town of Yongdok (not to be confused with Yongdong on the western sector). It had been defended by South Korean troops, who took it after American and British naval gunfire had wrecked the entire town.

Yongdok is 25 miles north of the First Cavalry supply port of Pohang. A rough Allied fighter airstrip was laid down in that vicinity in record time last week.

The Reds also stepped up pressure on the central front, where a low-gear drive has been under way to try to cut the main American supply line running from Pusan in the southeast to Taegu and thence on by road and rail to Yongdong on the western front.

Communist artillery and troop movements were reported near Hamchang, 35 miles northeast of Yongdong.

The United States Twenty-fifth Infantry Division and South Korean ground forces supported by Allied planes have slowed the enemy assault in the central sector.

General MacArthur said North Korean forces continued to build up strength against American-South Korean lines and "considerable strength" is moving toward the front along the Taejon-Yongdong line.

He said Communist reinforcements from Seoul are reported moving south toward Chungju, 50 miles northeast of Taejon on the central front.

MacArthur added there are reports of Red strength moving in an area between Kunsan, at the mouth of the Kum River and Kwangju, 75 miles southwest of Haejon.

The North Korean radio has claimed the capture of both points.

More fighter plane support was also in immediate sight. A 27,000-ton United States aircraft carrier (identified in San Francisco as the Boxer) arrived in Japan Sunday with a record load of warplanes. The big flattop, its decks crowded with F-51 Mustang fighters, crossed the Pacific in 8 days and 7 hours—also a record.

The Air Force took time out from its busy ground support missions to quash an unauthenticated report that 15 Russian-built Yak fighters had strafed American airbase positions in Korea. A spokesman said 15 B-29s briefly were thought to be enemy planes, but their identity was cleared up after an alert.

The Red tank attack started about noon Sunday with three—then six—armored vehicles snorting eastward from Taejon. As they rumbled 15 miles beyond the ruins of Taejon American F-80 jets took them under savage attack with rockets blazing.

Three of the tanks succeeded in crossing a branch of the Kum River, which winds through this area to the east of Taejon, as well as north of the fallen city. Bridge demolitions failed to hold back the steel monsters.

The North Koreans sent artillery fire and rounds of mortars whistling ahead of their tanks but their fire was generally ineffective up to 3 p. m.

However, the First Cavalry Division suffered its first few battle casualties from one Red mortar shell that scored a near miss.

Clearing weather permitted the Mustangs and jets to start a parade of close support missions Sunday at noon.

American artillery fire slackened about 5 p. m. Sunday but Mustangs continued strafing runs until dark. By this time they had flushed out a column of camouflaged vehicles believed to include tanks.

Field dispatches quoted an American divisional commander as confident that the North Korean schedule of power attacks under the cloak of darkness had been thoroughly upset by the coordinated American artillery and air strikes.

Correspondent King quoted the division commander as predicting that the days of retreat may now be over and United States troops would cling to their present positions.

Dean Got Out of Taejon Unhurt, His Aide Says

Dean personally led a 3.5 bazooka-launcher squad. He placed the squad at the second-story window of a house. It scored a direct hit on a North Korean tank.

"You could hear screaming inside the tank," Clarke said. "A second shot into the tank stopped the screaming. We put a third into it to make sure the tank was out of action."

Then Thursday evening General Dean began to lead a small motor convoy out of burning Taejon. It had trouble getting through the unfamiliar streets. Outside the city, road blocks and heavy enemy fire forced the convoy to double back.

Clarke was wounded in the right shoulder in this fire. Asked how had the wound was, he replied:

"I don't know. I haven't looked at it."

Also wounded in the shoulder—in the last enemy fire the party encountered—was Col. Jimmie Kim, General Dean's interpreter. He was caught by machine-gun fire after the party was forced to abandon its trucks and jeeps to cross rice paddies on its way to the cover of the mountains. Kim couldn't keep up and told the others to go on. He reached Okchan safely Friday morning.

(A report Saturday that General Dean had been wounded was attributed by General MacArthur's headquarters to Kim. Clarke's advice is more recent. There well may have been confusion in reports from the fact that both Kim and Clarke, in the general's party, were wounded.)

After the general left the group, Clarke led the men on until they came out of the mountains beyond the front line. There they stopped at a small village, just as American artillery started shelling it. They tried to get out, but ran into American rifle fire.

"We hit the ditches and held a council of war," the lieutenant said. "We didn't like going into rifle fire but we couldn't hang around that village while it was under such heavy shelling.

"So I got up, put my hands behind my head and yelled:

"'We are Americans. Don't shoot.'"

"I guess they saw us. They didn't shoot any more. Pretty soon we started passing American soldiers on the road and they sent a truck to bring us here."

Shoe Firm Announces General Price Boost

St. Louis, July 23 (AP).—The International Shoe Co. announced today price increases averaging 15 cents a pair.

Women's and children's shoes will go up about 10 cents a pair, the company announcement said. Men's shoes will sell about 20 cents a pair higher. The increases affect all types of shoes.

Edgar E. Rand, company president, said higher costs for raw materials caused the increase. He cited a 75 percent rise in the price of crude rubber.

'Love That Brute'? —Not Necessarily

By Richard L. Coe

THE COLUMBIA'S "Love That Brute" has few amusing moments and certainly does not make the recommended list.

Paul Douglas plays a misunderstood gangster of Chicago's prohibition era. He's goodish at it, though at this point his regulation thug-with-heart-of-gold is wearing thin. Joan Davis manages to be amusing when, as a nitery gal who's been around, she's called on to impersonate a discreet housekeeper.

The picture is a remake of one made nine years ago, "Tall, Dark and Handsome" and though 1928's the period, it makes only obvious stabs (the Charleston, a few short skirts) at recreating that era.

The story concerns a top gangster whose record of rubbing-out rival thugs' henchmen makes him highly respected in his metier. However it turns out he's not rubbed any one out, keeps all the missing men behind bars in his well-stocked cellar. This, for purposes of the plot, allows him to wind up in the clear at the end, get the girl and bow out of racketeering.

Although this has nothing to do with the picture, I might as well confess that movies about Chicago gangsters do not interest me in the slightest, a fact I daresay is shared by many people and one I wish the movie companies would catch on to. I couldn't care less about gangsters and as for gangsters with hearts of gold, I'm practically an early Rhode Island Puritan.

That personal non-preference aside, it doesn't seem to me that "Love That Brute" is a particularly bright comedy, anyway. It makes much of a boy hoodlum Douglas takes on to impersonate his son so he can employ the services of what he thinks is a governess but who, this being the movies, is just breaking her heart to sing hot numbers in a night club.

But she's a good girl from a small town, so naturally she reforms him. It takes quite a while and the more I think of it, the less you'll care to hear about it.

"LOVE THAT BRUTE," 20th Century-Fox release produced by Fred Kohlmar. Screen play by Karl Tunberg, Darrell Ware and John Lee Mahin. Photographed by Lloyd Ahern. Directed by Alexander Hall. Music by Cyril Mockridge. At the Columbia.

GENERAL MANAGER Richard Skinner will be finding his summer smack up against his winter at the Olney this week . . . Dick was company manager last season in New York for "The Devil's Disciple," which Maurice Evans and his company will be playing this week on Evans' first summer theater tour . . . The revival was one of the hits of Evans' season at the New York City Center this winter and Aldrich and Myers and Julius Fleischmann took it over for the upped-price Broadway run which followed . . . Dick should know the Shaw comedy inside out by now and if any understudy is needed, Dick could fill in . . . and love it.

"OKLAHOMA!"—not to disappoint readers who've come to expect monthly reports on the best of all our musicals—closed its season Saturday night in Chicago after a 12-week stand for its fifth visit . . . Variety estimates total profits on the Guild's breadwinner as $4,225,000—"so far" . . . Yes, it will reopen in September at Pittsburgh's "new" Nixon, the rechristened Senator . . . 'Tis said it costs $21,000 a week to operate the show.

ANOTHER OPERETTA was in the news last week, the "Okie" of its day, "Robin Hood," which started everyone singing "Oh Promise Me" near the turn of the century . . . Eugene Cowles, the basso star of this one "Brown October Ale") died this year, but last week's production at the St. Louis Muny Opera brought in $50,000, with Washington's Edwin Steffe among those in the cast . . . Seems to me a well-sung, well-dressed revival might again bring in the coin for the Reginald De Koven score, he who once started what Dr. Hans Kindler finally succeeded in doing, a symphony orchestra for Washington.

TITLE CHANGE: As "Ticket to Tomahawk," the Dan Dailey-Anne Baxter comedy about the West wasn't doing so well till some theater managers began calling it "The Sheriff's Daughter" . . . Result, in spots where it's been tried, is what you'd expect: mouths water . . . Hence, when "Ticket to Tomahawk" reappears tomorrow at the National, you'll find it also yclept "The Sheriff's Daughter."

THE SPOTLIGHT AGAIN: Eleanor Powell, whose taps are unsurpassed, takes over for a guest spot in the Capitol's Sun Valley musical, "Duchess of Idaho." In private the wife of Glenn Ford, she's slated to do a picture with him soon

WHEN "Lost in the Stars," which is set for the Gayety in December, recently was given by its original cast in concert form at Lewisohn Stadium, an audience of 10,000 showed up . . . The program was a memorial for Composer Kurt Weill, with Todd Duncan singing the role he'll have in this, his home city next winter . . . Duncan's now in Washington, resting for the start of the tour August 1 in San Francisco . . . In "Stars" Duncan has at last a role worthy of his unforgettable one in "Porgy and Bess."

26 Card Players Taken On 'Disorderly' Charge

Vice squad detectives arrested 26 persons on charges of disorderly conduct at 2:30 a. m. Saturday in a second floor apartment at 1409 14th st. nw. They forfeited $5 collateral each.

Police went to the apartment after neighbors complained of a large and boisterous party. When the door was opened in response to police knocks, 26 persons were sitting around two tables playing cards, but police said no gambling was observed.

Special Events Chief Chosen For Sesqui

Stephen J. McCormick, former manager of programs and operations for radio station WOL, has been appointed director of special events for the National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission.

McCormick has been assistant director of public relations for the commission, but the public relations staff has been abolished. Ben M. Morgan, former press agent for the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Board, has been named press relations officer.

The commission staff announced that President and Mrs. Truman and their daughter Margaret, hope to attend the first performance of Paul Green's "Faith of Our Fathers" August 4.

The symphonic drama is now in final rehearsals and will be the first production in the new $563,000 amphitheater in Rock Creek Park near 17th st. and Colorado ave. nw.

Kiplinger Staff Head To Talk at Luncheon

The National Capital Forge of the American Public Relations Association will hold a luncheon meeting at Lee House, 15th and L sts. nw., today at 12:15 p. m.

Speaker will be Warren D. Mullin, chief of staff of the Kiplinger Washington agency.

The most powerful gasoline your car can use!

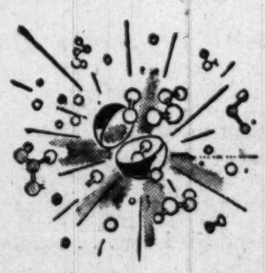
Yes, many of today's engines have been stepped-up . . . they call for more powerful gasoline! Now Shell gives you the most powerful gasoline your car can use—Shell Premium. It's "activated."

NO WONDER SHELL IS WINNING MORE NEW GASOLINE CUSTOMERS THAN ANY OTHER BRAND.*

Actually, Shell splits molecules to get more power for today's more powerful engines. So you get a gasoline that's "activated"!

Get a tankful of "activated" Shell Premium today. Your Shell Dealer is the man to see.

*From a continuing impartial study of monthly gasoline purchases over a period of 27 months.



Activation makes the difference

Shell scientists, using the finest available crude, activate the molecules by splitting and rearranging them according to Shell's formula for a perfectly balanced gasoline. The result—Shell Premium, the most powerful gasoline your car can use.

Crime Syndicates Found to Have Ties

Chairman Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) of the Senate Crime Investigating Committee, said yesterday the Nation's crime syndicates appear to have gentlemen's agreements dividing up territory for their multibillion-dollar rackets.

He said he has not yet determined whether there is a one-man "kingpin" of the underworld although "there seems to be different syndicates operating—some in one kind of thing and some operating in another." Some of the same names crop up in the various rings, he added.

Kefauver also said on a broadcast that criminals cannot operate in any sizable community without paying protection to some public officials. But the extent of it is hard to tell, he said.

The Senator said his committee has not yet determined the size of the criminals' annual "take." But he noted that the Massachusetts Citizens Committee estimated that "in four types of gambling activities, the take from the American people was some place between 15 billion and 23 billion dollars.

Kefauver said the big centers of narcotics and gambling operations are New York, Florida, the West Coast and Los Angeles. But "wherever you have a big city, you have a substantial amount of interstate gambling," he asserted.

"My preliminary opinion is that there is more of a federation between the syndicates, and I am not in a position to say as yet that there is one top overlord over all of the syndicates. But we haven't gotten far enough along for me to state a definite conclusion."

Kefauver refused to say whether he thought the FBI or other Federal agencies should be given authority to go into the States to stamp out inter-State gambling and other crime operations.

Alliance Session

Keep World Unity Goal, Baptists Told

Cleveland, July 23 (AP).—Dr. C. Oscar Johnson, Baptist World Alliance president, today said differences among constituent bodies must not "mar" the unity of the Baptist world movement.

He spoke at the eighth World Congress convened by the alliance. Some 20,000 are attending. The alliance is made up of more than 100 autonomous bodies.

"Some bodies in our fellowship," he said, "have established connections with other groups of Christians not of our Baptist family. These efforts at wider cooperation have in some unions and conventions been desirable for common interests and ends.

"Others in our family have not so united for good and sufficient reasons to them," he added, noting that:

"So long as we hold together on our great doctrines as set forth in the New Testament we will hold together at the center and at the same time recognize the rights of some to follow the leading of the spirit in their particular union or convention."

Dr. Johnson spoke of a "cloud of communistic conspiracy" and said its "blackness makes our lights the brighter." He also urged the congress not to forget "that the darkness is not all confined to Communist-dominated countries."

Arlington Man Shot to Death

a Negro. Smallwood saw the car enter the dead-end area and return, and was suspicious because he thought someone might be using the area to dump refuse.

So Smallwood investigated.—

After Smallwood found the body, he and Vaughn called police—Vaughn giving a description of a car, Smallwood telling of a body with two wounds in the side and one in the back.

The Fairfax County police broadcast was heard by County Detective William Durrer, driving on Route 236, 2 miles east of Fairfax.

Coincidence entered at this point: The auto ahead of Durrer's scoutcar matched the description of the police broadcast, the detective said.

Durrer ordered the driver to stop.

Taken to the Rugsby rd. scene, police said Crumption denied he had ever been there before.

His account of the shooting, police said, was that he was visiting friends in Virginia—Harris among them—while on sick leave from the railroad.

Last night, detectives quoted Crumpton, he and Harris played poker with several men in a house somewhere in Virginia. There was an argument over the game, Crumpton told police.

As he and Harris got into Crumpton's car, one of the men shot Harris, throwing the body against Crumpton's clothes, Crumpton continued.

The third man, said Crumpton, forced him at gun point to drive to his home. There the third man, whom police not identify, said Crumpton could took the body out of the car and ordered Crumpton to leave.

Murder Charge Placed Against Herndon Man

William Honesty, 42, of Sterling, Va., was killed instantly yesterday at 7 p. m. by a shotgun blast in the chest.

Fairfax County police charged Edward William Smith, 36, of Herndon, Va., with murder and held him in the county jail under $50,000 bond.

Smith told police he went into his house to get the shotgun following an argument with Honesty. Fairfax County Detective William Durrer said. After shooting Honesty, Smith said he called police.

in practically nothing. He had clambered up the hill from his home and was inspecting rails. He looked at the on-rushing train and then turned back to the rails again.

The conductor slammed the brakes on all cars. But it was plain the train couldn't stop in time.

Then Dowell jumped. He hit the ties running for the boy.

At that moment, Mrs. Carl Woodward, 23, out hunting for Jimmie, spied her son. She dashed toward him, too.

Dowell just avoided a three-way tie in the race. Only a few feet in front of the slowing train he scooped up Jimmie with his left hand, straight-armed Mrs. Woodward off the rails with his right, and jumped to the side with Jimmie under his arm.

The train just missed his shoulder. It ground to a stop in four car lengths.

"I thought it was sure death for the baby and his mother," the conductor said. "Jim did a great job. I don't see how he made it in time."

"That grand colored man," the grateful mother said. "I can never repay him."

Said Jim: "Prettiest baby I ever saw. I couldn't bear the thought of him getting killed."

torn-down rifle, helmet and uniform.

"Then we headed south," Ferguson said, with one of the boys leading the way, and his pal following. All I did was follow him. We never exchanged a word but just walked as if we were refugees and nobody paid any attention to us."

Once Ferguson came face-to-face with a North Korean sentry armed with a tommy-gun.

"He came around the corner and there was nothing to do but walk right past him," he said.

"I figured this was it, but took a deep breath, pulled the big hat down over my face and shuffled along like an old man of 90. And believe me, I felt like it at that moment."

Ferguson walked right past the guard, who didn't even give him a second look.

Late Friday, he met with Sergt. John M. Emmel of Philadelphia, who was also trying to get out. Ferguson's young Korean friends spotted Emmel first. They brought him over, telling him there was another American down the road.

"All I could see," Emmel said, "was a bent-over old Korean eating watermelon and I was surprised as hell when he started speaking in English. It wasn't until he took off his hat that I recognized him as an American."

They walked all Friday night and most of Saturday before they reached the American lines.

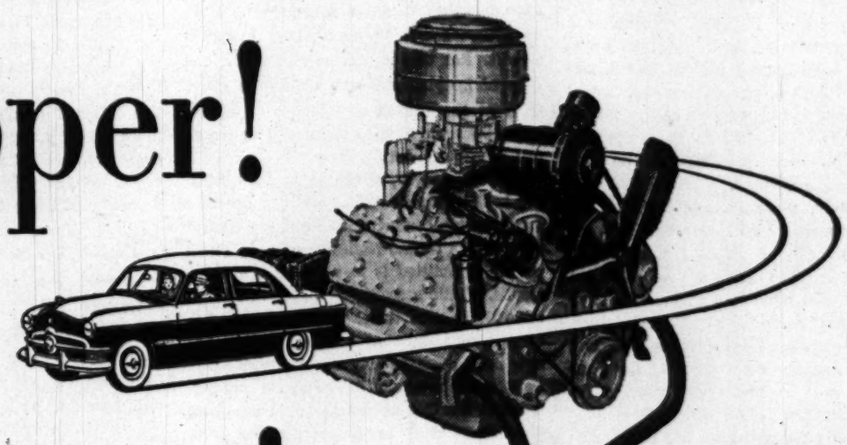
What a stepper!
Just hint to the gas pedal and she steps out like no other low-priced car. And that's true whether you're driving a Ford V-8 or "Six"; But this high-stepper is a low spender when it comes to costs. You can own a V-8, for example, for hundreds less than most "Sixes"—and a Ford "Six" for even less.


What a stopper!
This '50 Ford actually helps you apply the brakes: They're 35% easier-acting King-Size Brakes that use car momentum to help you stop. Like Ford's extra-rugged "Lifeguard" Body, they give you the kind of protection you'd expect only of costliest cars. And for added safety and comfort, you ride low and level in the "Mid Ship" section of the car, between the wheels—not over them. You're cradled in comfort on "Hydra-Coil" front springs and "Para-Flex" rear springs that give a road-hugging smoothness truly amazing.

What a looker!
Yes, again in '50, Ford received the Fashion Academy Gold Medal as "Fashion Car of the Year." And Fords stay good looking because their baked-on finish is "made to live outdoors." That means high resale value which, together with Ford's low running costs, puts Ford further out front as America's savingest car.

Focal Point Of Defense

The necessity for enlisting all aid in prosecuting the conflict in Korea should not detract attention from the North Atlantic Treaty Organization as the major emphasis in defense efforts. Western Europe is the area most vital in any East-West clash, and it is the area that most needs strengthening. President Truman's request for an additional 10 billion dollars in military expenditures, plus the new authorization for the military assistance program, will increase substantially the American share in Western defense. But that defense is a collective enterprise, and it will be up to the other participating nations to increase their contributions proportionately. President Truman has urged as much in his instructions to Charles M. Spofford, the new deputy American representative on the North Atlantic Council.

Fortunately, there already is indication that other member nations are taking the implications of the aggression in Korea seriously. Defense Ministers of the five Western Union nations, a regional subdivision of the Atlantic organization, have called for increased arms production and training. Perhaps the lessons of the Communist assault in Korea will provide the impetus that has been lacking. The blunt fact is that, although there has been progress, preparations have been moving slowly. There has been too much quibbling over the collective balance of forces; each nation seems to accept the principle except as applied to itself. Indeed, while the outside commitments of nations with overseas interests must be recognized, some means must be devised to appraise outside military requirements and avoid the siphoning off of too much strength from Europe.

The first need, as Mr. Spofford undoubtedly will emphasize, is for larger military budgets in the member nations—for more individual effort at least to bring national contributions up to par. Some, for example, are considerably below even the present percentage of the United States budget allocated to defense. Second, an extremely important contribution European nations could make would be to increase their manufacture of munitions, including those of the latest American design.

Hitler's former arsenal in the Ruhr can be used to good advantage for the manufacture of weapon parts, and the fact that the North Atlantic Council will discuss this aspect of the problem at its meeting in London this week is an indication of the realistic mood in which the joint defense problem is being tackled.

Genocide Convention

The communication by Mr. Alfred J. Schweppe, which appeared in this newspaper last Saturday, seems to present, in essence, two mutually contradictory contentions as arguments against Senate ratification of the United Nations convention on genocide. Mr. Schweppe says on the one hand that the convention "does make law" binding upon the United States, that it "makes genocide a crime, undertakes to define it in detail, and describes 'the acts which shall be punishable.'" And he says on the other hand that "the omission of 'political groups' and the requirement that there must be an intent to destroy the groups actually named in the convention 'as such', render the convention meaningless." Could it injure us to be bound by the convention if it were really meaningless?

What Mr. Schweppe fails to explain, moreover, is why Americans should hesitate to bind themselves under an international law forbidding the intentional destruction, in whole or in part, of "a national, ethnical, racial or religious group." This is what genocide means. It is a crime repugnant to all the traditions of the American people and already punishable, as A. A. Berle, jr., pointed out in his communication a fortnight ago, under the laws of every State in the Union. Genocide is not practiced in the United States, and this country has no reason to fear a prohibition under international law of an offense which would never be countenanced in any case by the laws or the mores or the consciences of the American people.

Mr. Schweppe is quite right, of course, in considering the genocide convention marred and weakened by omissions made at the instance of the Russians. But the convention is certainly not meaningless. It seems to us, on the contrary, to be immensely meaningful as the first stone of a foundation on which a future structure of international law will be erected. The need for such a beginning is emphasized by the Korean conflict. The world community cannot agree on much; but it can agree at least that mass destruction on grounds of race, religion or ethnic origin is and ought to be treated as a crime.

The United States should readily join the other nations of the world in making that crime punishable. A Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee under the chairmanship of Senator McMahon has studied the genocide convention thoroughly and recommended four "understandings" which remove the slightest risk that any practice now countenanced in this country could be considered indictable under the convention. The Senate will enhance the moral position of the United States by prompt ratification.

Eyes On The Goal

Beneath the powerful current of public opinion that has developed behind the United Nations policy in Korea and the Truman Administration's efforts to rearm the free world, occasional signs of impatience are beginning to appear. So far as the expression of this impatience is directed toward tightening our defense system, it is salutary and helpful. While accomplishing this purpose, however, we should beware of the danger of slipping into the loose conclusions that World War III has already begun and that precautions against all-out belligerence can be thrown to the wind.

This is precisely what the Kremlin would like to have us do for it tends to give substance to Soviet propaganda. The Daily Worker harps upon President Truman's "avowed readiness to convert the Korean war into World War III." Spokesmen for the Kremlin throughout the world are grasping for every scrap of evidence of an intention on our part to use the Korean episode as an excuse for an all-out military assault against Communist countries. When no evidence can be found, they manufacture it. For that reason as well as for the sake of keeping our own objectives clear, it is of the utmost importance to distinguish between what is happening in Korea and a general war.

There is danger, of course, that the fighting in Korea may spread until it becomes a world-wide conflagration. But the central point of the United Nations' policy to which we are committed is to avoid such a catastrophe. While recognizing that fact, a small minority is nevertheless saying, "Since the aggressive nature of Russian policy has now been unmistakably demonstrated, why wait for a showdown?" Others are suggesting that the United States should lay down ultimatums that "peripheral attacks" must stop at certain points or precipitate a general war. Obviously either of these steps would involve a very different policy from that on which the United States has embarked. Today we are fighting to enforce orders of the Security Council having the backing of 52 nations. The President has made it unmistakably plain that we shall pursue this policy of joint free-world defense against aggression. But to break away from that policy in anything like a "preventive war" or a series of ultimatums in different parts of the world would be a very different matter. We should then be in danger of dividing the free world that has been so remarkably united by the Korean war.

The peoples of all continents are longing for peace, stability and freedom—not for an exchange of masters. In applauding the Korean policy, therefore, we have consistently deplored the Administration's decision to intervene in Indo-China in behalf of imperialist France. Any taint of imperialism or of militarism in the sense of using superior armed might to dictate to other peoples will corrode the free-world unity that has been attained. If we are not to lose sight of our goal, we shall have to go about the business of rearming with a steadiness of purpose and a determination not to let increased power or the emotions that arise out of conflict divert us from the high-minded course that has won such widespread indorsement in the free world.

Atlantic Merger

Now that the President's order approving the merger of Pan American and American Overseas Airlines has taken effect, the manner in which the Civil Aeronautics Board was overruled may be examined more closely. "My objective," Mr. Truman wrote in upsetting the CAB decision against the merger, "is to accomplish a route pattern in which our Nation may have the benefit of competition to the principal traffic points in Europe, and to avoid a monopoly on the part of either of the United States carriers." This is tantamount to saying that the CAB either was not interested in these objectives or was not competent to advance them.

What really is at stake here is the President's power under the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938. A Supreme Court decision has held that it is not merely the President's right, but his duty to make the final decision in overseas air route cases because of their defense and foreign relations aspects. Sometimes the President's decisions, criticized at the time, have appeared wise in retrospect. For example, the certification of Pan American as an additional carrier in the Pacific now seems to have been wise from the point of view of defense. But the power to reverse the Civil Aeronautics Board is one to be used charily and only for compelling reason; else the CAB becomes nothing but a fifth wheel. It was never intended that the President should in effect rehear cases after the CAB had decided them—a practice he has followed with increasing frequency.

The disturbing aspect of this case is not so much the merger itself—though it was opposed on monopoly grounds by the Department of Justice as well as by the CAB majority—but the way in which the CAB's basic assumptions were disregarded. The President reversed the route pattern by certificating Pan American to Paris and Rome—points previously served exclusively by Trans World—and giving TWA entry to London and Frankfurt. If there are defense or international political angles to this reversal, they are not apparent. Maybe the tougher competition will stir new business, but both Pan American and TWA have been running with empty seats. There is a distinct possibility that, instead of consolidating the routes and making the airlines stronger, the President's order may mean that the Government will have to foot larger bills for air-mail subsidies. This in turn would increase the danger of a "chosen instrument," or single overseas carrier, which the President presumably opposes.

The vulnerable position in which the President has placed himself with respect to pressures is indicated by the sequence of events. The original CAB decision required months of tedious hearings and painful weighing of the evidence. When it was submitted to the White House on May 17, our understanding is that the President was ready to give it general approval. Then the pressure groups went to work and apparently enlisted the assistance of two White House aides. One curious circumstance was that Oswald Ryan, CAB member who voted for the merger, was invited to the White House to discuss the matter. Either by accident or design, CAB Chairman Joseph J. O'Connell, jr., did not receive an invitation. This was a slight which Mr. O'Connell could not overlook in pressing his resignation. The peculiarity of the situation was increased by the previous veiled individual pressure on at least one CAB member to change his attitude or not be reappointed.

Whether or not private influences figured in the President's final decision, he was inevitably subjected to them because of the dominant role he has elected to play in international air route cases. This, we think, is what needs to be changed. Either the law should be amended or the Administration's interpretation of it should be revised to make the President's function primarily one of making sure that all angles are explored. Certainly the President must consider international aspects of route cases, but the CAB's expert findings as to economic fact ought not to be upset lightly.

Trends In Dependency

On the assumption—good enough for purposes of statistical analysis—that children under the age of 18 and people of 65 or over are nonproducers, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. concludes that the burden of dependency on the productive population has been steadily decreasing until quite recently for about a century. A hundred years ago there were 113 children and aged persons to every 100 men and women in the chief working groups ranging in age from 20 to 65 years. By 1942 the ratio had fallen to 63 to 100. Since then the trend has been reversed and the ratio is now approximately 68 per 100. The age composition of the population has also undergone significant changes. For instance, the number of individuals 65 years of age or older has almost quadrupled since 1900, whereas the number of people in the productive age groups has not much more than doubled. This means that the ratio of children to the working population has dropped rapidly, although their actual numbers have risen steadily except during the depression of the 30s.

However, owing to the war and postwar upturn in the birthrate the child population is now increasing at a faster rate than the productive age groups. Moreover, this upward trend is expected to continue for another decade at least. At the same time the ratio of the aged to the productive population continues to rise, with the result that by 1960 the proportion of all dependent groups to the productive population is expected to reach the highest point since 1910.

The lesson to be drawn from this statistical survey is obvious: With the child and aged population growing at a faster rate than the working population a larger amount of the country's material resources will have to be used to support nonproducers than heretofore. That may put an increasing strain on the economy, and in any case it will add to the relief burdens of many communities, however prosperous the country may be.

Bugs To Europe?—Nuts

"The Bearcats of Bastogne" through their general hurled back a single challenging word when the Nazi foe demanded their surrender in the Battle of the Bulge. "Nuts" in Europe today is one of the best known of American slang words as well as meaning hard, indehiscent fruit. It is being reapplied right now to charges hurled by the Soviet propagandists that Americans are sowing potato bugs on the Russian side of the fence.

But natural scientists in the USSR as well as biologists everywhere can see through such prevarication in a flash. They know that, biologically, the land mass that is Europe and Asia is very old and mature, that plants and animals well under control there go on the rampage when exported to the Western Hemisphere. We have only to recollect the strict agriculturally administered laws now in force here against floral and faunal importations. We have learned the lessons taught by such "new weeds" as the dandelion, devil's paintbrush, the water hyacinth, certain cereal smuts and rusts; Dutch elm fungus, the chestnut blight, Norway rat, mongoose and half a hundred other things. All came from abroad and war cannot be blamed.

The shoe doesn't fit the other foot. Most plants and animals transplanted to Europe or Asia from America do not do well. They must have care to compete with native things. During late summer a special Bobby mounts guard over the small display of American goldenrod Kew Garden officials have proudly made to grow near London.

"You're Helping Me Get In, Huh?"

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

Where Next?

THE SOVIET RULERS are now clearly faced with an enormously tempting opportunity. This is to start another drive, patterned on the aggression in Korea, while the West is still disarmed, and while the inadequate conventional military power of the United States is wholly committed in Korea.

Will the men in the Kremlin succumb to this temptation? If so, where?

The most knowledgeable of the State Department's team of Russian experts are now anxiously searching for possible answers to these questions. They are inclined to make two basic, but wholly tentative assumptions.

The first is that the Soviet rulers, although they are now obviously willing to risk world war, will only act where they can reasonably hope that the Western powers can be forced to abandon vital positions without general war. The second is that the Kremin will if possible avoid the use of Russian troops. In the light of these tentative assumptions, five basic areas of danger are now being scrutinized.

ONE. A Chinese Communist attack on Indo-China, Burma, Formosa, or Korea itself.

The experts point out that aggression by the Chinese Communists at any one of these four points would almost certainly involve them in the end in open hostilities with the United States, as well as with France in the case of Indo-China, and the British Commonwealth in the case of Burma. Obvious advantages would accrue to Stalin if his major antagonists were even more deeply involved in Asia than at present. But equal advantages would not accrue to Mao Tse-tung.

On balance, it is considered improbable that the Chinese Communists are anxious for war now with the Western powers, and also improbable that the Chinese Communists are so controlled by the Kremlin that they can be forced to act against their will. But this is, of course, no more than a guess, and a guess must be hastily qualified in all sorts of ways.

TWO. Aggression in Iran.

This would require the use of Soviet forces, since there are no neighboring satellite armies to take on the task of "liberation." Moreover, corruption within, combined with the pressure of the Communist-run Tudeh party, may yet cause internal collapse. Even so, an attack on Iran is by no means ruled out.

THREE. An attack by the Eastern satellite forces against Greece.

The ominous Cominform line that Greece is being organized as a "base for imperialist aggression" is taken entirely seriously, as a possible prelude to attack. Nevertheless, the experts are inclined to doubt that Bulgaria and the other satellites will march, unless the flank can first be assured by an agreement between Tito and the Kremlin. And there is no real reason for believing that such an agreement is now likely.

FOUR. An attack by the same satellite forces in Yugoslavia.

The experts unanimously believe that Yugoslavia would almost certainly have been attacked already, if the Soviet rulers had been confident that the satellite armies could win without Russian troops, and without world war. According to military estimates, the tough Yugoslav army should be able to defeat the satellite armies of Bulgaria, Hungary and Romania.

Yet here it is worth noting that the current State Department study of possible areas of aggression in fact began even before the attack on Korea—and Korea itself was ruled out. This was because of that grotesquely mistaken military estimate of the situation, in Seoul, in Tokyo, and in the Pentagon. According to this estimate, the Southern Koreans were more than a match for the Communist puppets. It is not impossible that the military are equally wrong about Yugoslavia. This is one reason why Yugoslavia is now generally rated as the number two danger spot.

FIVE. A new blockade of Berlin, enforced this time by the Soviet-sponsored East German army, probably after the ostensible withdrawal of Russian occupation troops, and with radar jamming to prevent a new airlift.

THIS IS CONSIDERED the greatest danger of all, if only because it so neatly fits the Korean precedent. The United States and its allies would be given the terrible choice between fighting German puppet troops and a general war. And from the very start, Berlin—and then all Germany, and then all Western Europe—has been the central Soviet objective.

WHETHER IN GERMANY or elsewhere, a new Soviet drive is now considered wholly possible, perhaps even probable. And the period of deadly danger will not be of short duration. For at least two years, thanks to the folly of American disarmament, the Soviets will enjoy a crushing military superiority over the Western world, in every area except nuclear weapons. Thus for at least two years, the men in the Kremlin will be constantly tempted to strike before Western rearmament can begin to take hold. Yet those best qualified to judge are still convinced that we can avoid ultimate catastrophe, if the whole vast resources of the West are mobilized as rapidly as possible, if the Soviet rulers can be convinced that they will pay a terrible price for new aggressions, and if our nerves hold steady.

Watergate Blues

Thousands of music-loving and civic-minded Washingtonians will be disturbed by the threatened discontinuance of the annual Watergate concerts. Perhaps the reasons for the lack of success of these concerts do not lie with the public, however, but are to be found on the administrative side of the "gate."

While the beauty of the Watergate setting is not to be denied, it must be admitted that the physical facilities are not equal to what one might expect in return for the prices that are charged. From 70 cents to $3.00 are expensive rates for folding chairs, concrete steps, sudden rains, planes roaring overhead periodically, etc. In these times, when the orchestra is in competition with movies, radio, television, Washington heat, and the general high cost of living, many people feel these prices are too much of a pinch on the pocketbook for what is received in return.

Also, the management might review its policy concerning refunds or rain-checks when the concerts are interrupted by rain. The present method of refusing refunds or rain-checks in an attempt to keep the customers on hand until intermission time (when no refunds or rain-checks are in order) is not conducive to repeated attendance or goodwill.

It would seem much better to have six or seven thousand patrons who have paid perhaps 35 cents to $1.25 at each concert, than a handful who have paid the much higher rates now charged. JAMES F. MAUK.
Washington.

Effective U. N.

Ferdinand Kuhn ends his July 16 article on the "Road to Korean Peace" with a discussion of the statement by Philip Jessup that the United Nations had come into its own as a "functioning instrument of collective security." Kuhn notes that "obviously, the United Nations cannot survive as such an instrument if every action against aggression has to depend on Soviet abstention from its meetings." His only suggestion to meet this is the passing of an advisory resolution by the Little Assembly.

This resolution, even if adhered to by the participants, could command no ready police force to enforce a world law against such aggression. In an area where we had no previous commitments, as we had in Korea, our Congress might not feel bound to furnish immediate help. However, if we had a permanent and legal strengthening of the United Nations, it would not be necessary for the world to wait for each separate nation to provide the means for action. This is what the founders of the United Nations and the people of the world intended.

However, we do have, just for the moment, the makings of a world government with limited powers. So far, Russia has not threatened to leave the United Nations. We cannot yet say we have a federation, but by whatever name, this is what the world is waiting for.

Bells And Bullets

Wouldn't it be soul-inspiring to hear all the church bells of one city chiming at the same time for a period of 10 minutes?

At 12 noon let every church bell in every city and village in a specific State ring out for 10 minutes, regardless of the name of the Church over the doorway—all ringing together, as a renewal of our American faith in God and of our righteous cause in conflict at this time!

For the next 48 days—beginning alphabetically with Alabama start all the Church bells in this Nation ringing by States—every single one in Alabama to ring first. And so on each following day, through Wyoming with the Church bells in the Nation's Capitol, District of Columbia, ringing every 48 days for 10 minutes at noon!

This would have a profound effect not only on each American but also on every God-fearing person throughout the world. Let them know us by hearing our bells!

FEPC Aims

On of the greatest dangers to the continued progress of the Negro in America is that menace inherent in the type of thinking represented by F. H. Mebane in his letter of July 14. His academic training has not fitted him to discern what it is that FEPC is intended to achieve on the positive side of economic opportunities for all people in all sections of our country, not just for Negroes and not just for the South.

Moreover, Mebane obviously does not understand that "Southern democracy" as it exists in his reputedly "liberal" North Carolina is infused with legal and economic and political and social restrictions that greatly hamper the development of the total man, both Negro and white. Much of the hampering of Negroes in North Carolina, as elsewhere in the South, emanates from those intangible forces af law and of custom that stifle the spiritual man in his attempt to achieve meaningful human values as well as material well-being. "A Fraud And A Hoax"

I cannot force myself to share The Washington Post's jubilation over the Tydings' subcommittee report on Senator McCarthy's charges (editorial published July 18). I am among the thousands of Americans who believe China's fall to communism was greatly aided by a clever band of manipulators in the U. S. State Department.

It seemed ironical that Herblock should choose a crumbling tank to represent "McCarthyism." It's just such equipment that's costing us Korea. It's not the drivers of the tanks but those who are charged with keeping them in repair that are aiding the enemy. I'm a diehard—I'm for McCarthy.

Abandoned Dogs

On July 16, a woman drove to a vacant piece of land up the road about one half mile from where I live and put out of her car a shepherd type dog, with three little puppies about three weeks old.

A sick man in his bed on the second floor across the road saw this woman put out these dogs. She did leave some bread. This man was not able to get the license number of the car for which we in the neighborhood are very sorry. The wife of this man brought this mother and her puppies to their place, fed them and did what she could.

Later this dog family was taken to the Montgomery County Shelter. Why did not the woman do this very thing in the first place if she did not want the dog family? It is bad enough to abandon a lone animal, much less a mother and puppies. I hope she reads this and the next time will take the animals at once to a shelter instead of abandoning them to starve.

Seating Red China

Prime Minister Nehru in trying to give peace to the world, has the additional interest of the part of which India must play in the Far East with China and Russia. Nehru in trying to placate the Russians and the Chinese Reds.

Roosevelt in World War II in trying to save the lives of American manhood, tried to placate the Moscow government with materials for which to fight the war in the East. Having started down this road, it was found to be difficult, if not impossible to appease the power and greed of the Politburo.

Nehru is a great scholar and statesman. In his personal capacity he is an inspiration to India's millions. This able leader should realize again, his first principles of political philosophy, which begin with moral law and moral obligation. These laws may be broken, but the penalty is more confusion, instead of solving the conflicts of peace.

Red China which has a government with hardly a year's growth is now using a propaganda machine to propagate hate, lies and distrust of the United States. Is this government responsible? Should it be recognized when it has held American diplomatic officials for a year without allowing communications with their own government? Where are the first principles of government? Free nations do not look upon coercion as a means of setting free the minds of men.

Nehru is indeed a great man; Roosevelt also was one, but he realized too late that appeasement is not the answer to coercion. We know Nehru's intentions are good, but these do not solve our problems today.

HAYWOOD C. McMULLAN.
Washington.

Prime Minister Nehru of India seems to be spearheading a propaganda drive to seat the Chinese Red Fascists in the U. N. Security Council. This would, of course, give Russia two out of five big power votes in this body. Our inept State Department seems unable to discover a valid reason to oppose this propaganda. It has already announced that the United States will not use its veto power to prevent seating of the Chinese Reds. Prior to the present double-deal war it was definitely vacillating on the question.

But the United Nations was founded on the theory that it would be a union of free and independent nations; not a clique of stooges controlled by Moscow. Moscow's reply to Nehru indicated clearly that it is directing the foreign policies of its North Korean stooge and, if anyone thinks that the Chinese Reds have any more sovereignty than North Korea, his head should be examined or, perhaps, his loyalty checked.

Why can't the State Department explain this to Nehru? Also why can't the State Department issue a paper proving that the so-called Chinese revolution was really a putsch engineered by the Russians? Of course the answer is that our State Department originated the theory and still hopes that the Chinese Reds are merely independent agrarian Socialists. But for our State Department we would now have a million Chinese soldiers ready to fight for us rather than against us.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The President's Military Program

THE PRESIDENT has not crossed the bridge from a peacetime economy into full mobilization. He has not crossed that bridge because he has not yet come to it.

Lippmann

The military program he has asked for is calculated, if I understand it correctly, to prepare for two eventualities. One is total war. The other is a long period of tension and watchful waiting.

THE EXTRA 10 billion, or upward of 15 if we include increased foreign military aid, can be a first installment of total mobilization. It is about all that could be spent usefully in the next few months even if the decision had been taken to wage total war. At the beginning of a mobilization it is not possible to spend great sums quickly.

On the other hand, the increased amount of military expenditure is just about what the President's economic advisers estimate the country could support under its peacetime economy. They have undoubtedly told the President that the real annual output should increase about 9 to 10 billions on the average over the next few years, and that therefore the country could "for a number of years," as the President put it in his message, "support continuing defense expenditures, including assistance to other nations, at a higher level than we had previously planned." Thus the sums asked by the President could establish a new plateau of normal peacetime military spending.

The new program can, therefore, be the first step up the long stairs to total mobilization for a total war. Or it can be a step up to a permanently higher level of military power in being—in other words, to a larger peacetime standing Army, Navy and Air Force. Which it is to be depends upon events and how they affect the policies of Government.

There is no reason for thinking that the President and his advisers have overestimated the productivity of the American economy. In fact, it is reasonable to assume that, if put to it, American industry could today surpass greatly its performance in the Second World War. Due to large capital investment and to managerial and engineering advances, the productivity of American industries, especially in those needed for war, has increased spectacularly. Measured in 1949 prices, productivity per man hour was $1.57 in 1939. It is now about $2.12. Productivity has been growing since 1945 at an annual rate of 2.5 percent compounded. That means that the total output of the American economy is already two and a half times as great as it was in the year before Pearl Harbor, and that it is growing—though working time has actually been decreasing—at the average rate of 9 to 10 billions a year.

The worrisome question is how much of this incomparable industrial power can be translated into fighting power. The battlefields are far away. It takes a large effort to support even a small army across a wide ocean. To move one division from the United States to Korea means transporting 19,000 men and 85,000 measurement tons of equipment a distance of about 5000 miles. Military power on land diminishes rapidly with distance. In the war Germany mobilized 17 million men and we mobilized 14 million. But Germany had 313 divisions and we had 90 divisions. "The figures show," said General Marshall in his report, "how heavily the United States was concentrating on aerial warfare, on the production and movement of arms for its own troops and those of its allies, and the meaning in terms of manpower of waging war from 3000 to 9000 miles from our shores."

BECAUSE it takes such a big effort in the United States to make a small effect on the ground in Korea, the President was being very optimistic, it seems to me, when he told Congress that the extra 10 billions would cover the Korean campaign and also an increase in our forces in being. Apart from the experience gained, the men and the materials committed to the Korean campaign are subtracted from, not added to, our military power in the rest of the world. Unless we are to assume that the Korean campaign will be concluded successfully in a very short time—say this year—and therefore concluded with very small forces, the cost of that campaign alone will cut deeply into the appropriation that the President has asked for.

Whatever these Korean campaign costs, the price will have to be paid until there is an honorable settlement in the United Nations. But under no circumstances should the Korean campaign, or any other action under the Truman Doctrine against satellite armies, be allowed to divert us or to distract us from our paramount interest, which is to build up and to maintain uncommitted American military forces designed entirely and especially to balance the uncommitted military forces of the Soviet Union itself. In all our calculations, in all the programs we adopt, in all our allocations, first and highest priority should never be in doubt for the forces in strategic reserve to deter direct Soviet military aggression.

Mental Care Hospitals in U. S. Jammed

By the United Press

More than 600,000 persons are now jammed in overcrowded and understaffed State mental hospitals, Dr. Leonard Scheele, Surgeon General of the Public Health Service, reported yesterday.

He said a survey showed the rate of overcrowding increased by nearly 10 percent from 1947 to 1948. In three States, the average patient population was about 1½ times the hospitals' capacity.

Dr. R. H. Felix, director of the National Institute of Mental Health, reported that State mental hospitals have less than half the number of physicians they need to provide adequate medical and psychiatric care.

He also said the survey showed that "with few exceptions" Southern and Western States have fewer facilities for the mentally ill than Northern and Eastern States.

On a Nation-wide basis, State hospitals had three patients for each 1000 persons in the State. But New York had a ratio of 5.5 patients per 1000 population, as compared with 1.7 in New Mexico.

Patients diagnosed as psychotic accounted for more than 80 percent of all persons in the hospitals. Dementia praecox accounted for about 20 percent of these, psychosis with cerebral arteriosclerosis 16 percent, senile psychosis 13 percent and manic depressive psychosis 6 percent.

Texas Run-Off Due in Race For 2d Place

Dallas, Tex., July 23 (AP).—A Dallas insurance men with a caravan of hillbilly singers and a quiet, studious east Texas lawyer were in the Democratic run-off today for lieutenant governor of Texas.

The Governor's race was never in doubt in tabulation of Saturday's Democratic primary in Texas. Tall, handsome and wealthy Gov. Allan Shivers, 42, was sent back for his first full term in the Governor's chair. Today's count gave Shivers 707,342 and March 168,672 votes.

Pierce Brooks of Dallas and Ben Ramsey, a seasoned politician from San Augustine in east Texas, led the 12-man field in the lieutenant governor's race. Brooks today had 181,489; Ramsey 163,141.

Nineteen of Texas' 20 Democratic Congressmen were reelected, unofficial returns showed today. Representative Ken Regan of Midland faced a run-off in the second primary in August. And no candidate in the race for Democratic nomination to oppose Texas' only Republican Congressman—Representative Guill of Pampa—had a majority.

Shivers' closest opponent in the seven-man governor's race was Caso March, 39, a former Baylor University law professor, who made his third unsuccessful bid for governor. Shivers held almost a four-to-one majority over March throughout the tabulations.

Almost a million votes were cast.

Victory in the primary—or second primary if run-offs are necessary—generally is the same as election in this Democatic state.

In the vast, far west Texas Sixteenth District, Representative Ken Regan of Midland fell short of a majority over two opponents.

The other congressional run-off was for the Democratic nomination to oppose Texas's only Republican Congressman—Representative Ben Guill of Pampa—in the November general election in the Panhandle Eighteenth District. Mrs. Altavene Clark of Amarillo, who has been working in Washington since 1933, was leading the four-man field. In second was Leroy Lamaster, a Perryton farmer, who worked for the farm vote.

This afternoon Mrs. Clark had 12,080 votes and Lamaster 9833.

Regan was ahead with 19,674 votes in today's tabulation. But Paul Moss, wealthy Odessa attorney and oilman, whose follwers charged Regan "votes with Republicans," had 15,179 votes. Fred Hervey, 40, El Paso restaurant chain operator, who sail a young man was needed in the office, had 8346.

J. E. McDonald, State agriculture commissioner, faced a run-off in his bid for reelection. His name was on the Democratic ballot by order of the State Supreme Court after the State Democratic executive committe had tried to take him off on party disloyalty grounds. McDonald had 357,761 votes at 6 p. m. John C. White, vocational agriculture teacher from Wichita Falls, had 175,702; Charlie McLellan of Eagle Lake had 165,767 and Tom Fairey of Manor 99,351.

Russian Expected To Reject August Council Reign

Lake Success, N. Y., July 23 (NYHT).—Yakov A. Malik, Russian delegate to the U. N., is scheduled to hold the key post of president of the Security Council for August, but he's expected to turn it down. Under the alphabetical rotation system, the post belongs to the Soviet Union next month.

However, with the Soviet boycott expected to continue, the Council must either select a presiding officer for the month, or drop Russia for the time being and seat Sir Gladwyn Jebb, of Great Britain, next in line.

The Council expects to meet Friday to iron out this procedural difficulty. One thing is certain—Council members won't let Malik's absence deter them from their work in the Korean crisis.

General of the Army Douglas MacArthur's first report on unified command operations in Korea is expected Tuesday.

Nats Beaten Again by Tribe, 6-2; Lemon Wins 15th

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

THE AMERICAN LEAGUE'S vital statistics are now definitely more interesting. They indicate that the Tigers aren't going to run away with the race; the Yankees are still in there plugging, the Indians are a new threat to take it all, and the Red Sox can't quite be counted out yet.

For six weeks, since June 14, the Tigers had been breezing along in front, looking like the best team in the league, but even the most confident Detroit fans had been holding their breaths. With their absence of injuries, the Tigers were pressing their luck, and how long it would hold out none could say.

Povich

Even Manager Red Rolfe conceded that the Tigers were blessed during the first half of the season when he was able to keep all of his regulars, outside of his pitchers, in the lineup every day. He was operating, he knew, with the thinnest bench of reserves in the league, and any accident to any regular could be disastrous.

Well, it finally happened. Vic Wertz, his good right fielder and the big RBI man on the club, came down with a leg injury that kept him out of the Yankee series. The Tigers promptly went into a nose-dive.

TO THE CREDIT of the Yankees, it must be observed that they are habitually at their best in the crucial jousts with the top clubs.

For years, now they've been slaughtering such as the Red Sox in the head-to-head battles. They'd have been in front before this, had they had the same success against the second-division teams.

Right now, you'd have to say the Yankees are the most interesting team in the league. They've come up with something special in Hank Bauer, the rookie outfielder who never could untrack himself until this season, and is now hitting better than .340 and taking up a lot of the slack caused by the defection of Joe DiMaggio and Tommy Henrich.

And Casey Stengel apparently has solved his first base troubles despite himself. He quit on Johnny Mize, ticketed him for the minors again, only to find his situation so desperate Mize's departure was delayed. Now Big Jawn is on a hitting spree and Stengel has no first base problem.

And all of a sudden Joe DiMaggio has also started to hit. There never was any question of the Yankees' zest for the battle, and in a close race they are always a solid sort of bet.

THE INDIANS, now only three games off the lead, are in the favored position of being able to throw a good pitcher at the opposition every day. Despite the bouquets tossed at the Detroit pitching staff early in the season, it doesn't compare now with the array Lou Boudreau has at his beck.

If Bob Lemon isn't the best pitcher in the A. L., who is? His 15 wins at this point certainly label him as such. And Bob Feller is now looking suspiciously like the Rapid Robert of old, plus that good curve ball. They don't shade Early Wynn by much, though. He's pitching the best ball of his life. And on that fourth day, Boudreau can come up with hard-balling Mike Garcia, and still have Steve Gromek and Sam Zoldak in relief. He's deeper in good pitchers than any other manager.

Power-wise, though, the Indians strangely enough don't stack up with the other clubs despite boasting in Al Rosen the league's top home run hitter, and other threats in Larry Doby and Luke Easter. Only Doby and Dale Mitchell are hitting more than .300 in contrast to the grist of .300 hitters on the other first-division teams.

THE LONG-SHOT club in the first division is, of course, the Red Sox, who are still only six games out of it despite the manner in which they have been stumbling around all season. If the Red Sox happen to hit a hot streak and move to the top, it would be the screwiest turn of events—yet.

Steve O'Neill will be operating for the next several weeks without Ted Williams, but Boston fans remember that when the Sox had their longest winning streak last year, Williams was out of the lineup. Not that he isn't important to them; none could argue that. But if they rise above his absence you'd have to call it thrilling.

The Red Sox came from 11 games back last season to take the lead in the final week before blowing the pennant. With all that power, they're never to be kissed off lightly. And all of a sudden, O'Neill's pitching staff has squared away somewhat with the resurgence of Ellis Kinder and Walt Masterson as winners. Even Mickey McDermott went the full route the other day. They're hard to figure.

OUT AT THIRD—As any umpire can plainly see, Manager Lou Boudreau, of Cleveland, is tagged out by Eddie Yost trying to slide into third base against the Nats yesterday. Boudreau tried to go from first to third on Larry Doby's centerfield single in the third inning. Umpire Jim Hanochick is on hand to call it. Sandalio Consuegra (15) backs up Yost. The Indians won, 6-2

Singleton, Sima Tough After Indians Rout Kuzava

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The Cleveland Indians yesterday handed their man, Bob Lemon, a quick 6-0 lead over the Nats, which was equivalent to a lock and key for the league's top pitcher, and he won his seventh straight.

Eventually, the Nats contrived a pair of runs off Lemon to make it a 6-2 defeat but they were a gone gang after the third inning, and Lemon racked up the distinction of being the first pitcher in the league to win 15 games.

Bob Kuzava started the game for the Nats, but the latecomers in the crowd of 19,335 didn't see him. He departed early in the second inning, after the Indians rapped him for two runs in the first and three more in the second.

The Nats got some excellent relief pitching from rookies Al Sima and Elmer Singleton, who shut the Indians out in the last six innings, but were rewarded with only those two futile runs in the seventh.

Lemon Snuffs Nat Rally

Their biggest chance to get back in the ball game, the Nats fluffed in the eighth inning after Noren led off with a single to right and Dale Mitchell obligingly muffed Mickey Vernon's soft fly to left. Whereupon Lemon immediately took the innards out of the rally by grabbing Ed Stewart's shot into the box and routing it around the bases for a double play.

Kuzava, a hot article in previous outings, wasn't throwing much except his clippings at the Indians in those first two innings. They banged him for six hits, some of them singles, before he heard the showers beckon.

His first mistake was to walk lead-off man Mitchell, and when Boudreau lashed a double to left center, Mitchell scored all the way from first base. Al Rosen moved Boudreau home with a single to left.

That 2-0 lead suddenly burgeoned to 5-0 in the second. Gordon and Kennedy led off with singles, and with two out, Mitchell banged a three-bagger high off the right field wall to score 'em both.

Consuegra Relieves Kuzava

Sandy Consuegra got the pitching job at that point, and walked Lou Boudreau and pitched a single to Larry Doby. Mitchell scored on Doby's hit, and the Nats finally got the side out when Noren's superb throw nipped Boudreau going to third base.

In the third, with two out, the Indians picked up their sixth run. Gordon launched it with a double to center and romped home when Kennedy looped a single to right.

Boudreau helped Lemon to keep the Nats scoreless by starting double plays in the second and

Ryan, Jones Fight

Phils Win 2, Lead Cards By ½ Game

Cincinnati, July 23 (AP). — The Philadelphia Phils moved into sole possession of first place in the National League today as they cooled off the Cincinnati Reds by taking both ends of a doubleheader, 12 to 4 and 7 to 4. The twin victory moved the Phils a half game ahead of St. Louis.

The Phils in winning three of four games with the Reds became the only Eastern club to take a series from Cincinnati during the Redleg home stand.

A fist fight between Connie Ryan of the Reds and Willie Jones of the Phils enlivened the second game. It brought virtually all players of both teams boiling on to the field in a pushing and shoving match and the game was held up for almost 10 minutes. Both Ryan and Jones were banished from the contest.

The fight occurred as Jones slid into Ryan in the third inning in an unsuccessful attempt to break up a double play.

Cincinnati sent Ken Raffensberger and Ewell Blackwell to the mound with only two days of rest each and neither was equal to the occasion. The Phils clubbed Raffensberger and his successors for 15 hits in the opener including two home runs by Jones and one each by Del Ennis and Andy Seminick.

Curt Simmons, headed for training duty with the National Guard, won his thirteenth game of the season.

Blackwell lasted only through the seventh. His conqueror, Russ Meyer, also needed help from Jim Konstanty.

Cards Put Braves in Fourth, 8-4

St. Louis, July 23 (AP).—Al Brazle, although needing help in the last inning, pitched the St. Louis Cardinals to an 8 to 4 decision over the Boston Braves today.

Brazle batted in two of the runs in an attack that included doubles by Tommy Glaviano, Enos Slaughter, Del Rice and Glenn Nelson. The loss put the Braves in fourth place in the National League. Brooklyn took third by beating Pittsburgh, 11-6.

Four Redbird double plays helped Brazle during the first eight innings and Harry Brecheen stopped a Boston rally with two out and two runs across in the ninth.

The Redbirds jumped on Bob Chipman for two runs in the opening frame when Stan Musial singled Chuck Diering and Glaviano home. In the third inning Diering walked, scored on Glaviano's two-bagger, who in turn scored on Slaughter's double.

Bucky Walters, one-time pitching ace for the Cincinnati Reds, took over the mound duties after Brazle singled Nelson and Rice across the plate in the fourth.

Walters, in his first appearance since returning to an active role, allowed two runs on two singles, a double and a wild pitch in the fifth. He then settled down and together with Johnny Antonelli, held St. Louis scoreless.

Bosox Swat Soft-Touch Browns Again

Boston, July 23 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox won their thirteenth game out of 14 starts against the St. Louis Browns today. Bobby Doerr clinched the 6-2 victory by banging his fifteenth homer—a three-run blow—for his fifth in the last six games.

Ellis Kinder went the distance as the Sockers made a three-game series sweep to wind up their home stay with a 9-4 record. While notching his tenth triumph of the season, Kinder was slugged for homers by Don Lenhardt and Les Moss in the first and ninth frames.

The Red Sox sewed up the contest, which drew a skimpy 19,452 crowd, in the first inning against Don Johnson. A walk, two singles and Doerr's four-bagger provided four runs.

The other two Boston markers were chalked up in the second frame when Johnson was relieved by Cuddles Marshall. Billy Goodman opened with a triple and Johnny Pesky was passed. Marshall then took over and was greeted by Dom DiMaggio's double.

Big Walt Dropo, who was battling Detroit's George Kell for the American League's batting honors until the Browns came to town Friday, was blanked for the tenth straight time at bat.

Doris Hart Wins

Ted Schroeder, Flam in Finals

River Forest, Ill., July 23 (AP).—Ted Schroeder of La Crescenta, Calif., and Herbert Flam of Beverly Hills, Calif., won championship pairing today in the 40th national clay courts singles championship today.

They will meet in the final game of the tennis classic tomorrow. Schroeder, rated the Nation's top amateur and seeded No. 1 in the tournament defeated Tony Trabert of Cincinnati, O., soundly, 6—2, 6—2, 6—3.

Flam defeated Arthur Larsen of San Leandro, Calif., in straight sets, 6—2, 6—2, 6—2.

The Women's singles title was won today by Doris Hart of Jacksonville, Fla.

Miss Hart ran through a 6—1, 6—3 match against Shirley Fry of Akron, Ohio., without difficulty.

Murtaugh KO'd, Ejected, Charged With Error on 1 Play

Pittsburgh, July 23 (AP).—Pittsburgh's Danny Murtaugh was knocked out, ejected from the game and charged with an error all on one play in the third inning against Brooklyn here today. Murtaugh took Duke Snider's roller on the base path and attempted to tag Bob Morgan, running for second. Morgan collided with Murtaugh, knocking him out.

Murtaugh dropped the ball, the runners were safe and Murtaugh was ejected when he argued with Umpire Al Barlick after he came to.

Hall of Fame Has Dedication

Cooperstown, N. Y., July 23 (AP). Baseball bigwigs will dedicate a new $175,000 wing to the national baseball Hall of Fame tomorrow. In the annual game at Doubleday Field, the Boston Red Sox play the New York Giants.

The big new wing for the ivy-covered museum will permit better display of the countless balls, bats, gloves, uniforms and trophies that have accumulated since 1939 in this shrine of the national sport.

Commissioner A. B. Chandler will make the dedication address.

Unlike the all-star game, in which the American League has a big margin, the National League leads in Hall of Fame games, 5 to 3. Last year, however, the Washington Senators beat the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The game starts at 1 p. m., Eastern Standard Time, and will be broadcast by NBC and a number of baseball networks, including Liberty, Giants, Atlantic and Cubs.

Pitcher Rogovin Grand Slams

Detroit Trails, 5-4, in Ninth, Wins on Kolloway's Single

New York, July 23 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers staged a last ditch rally to defeat the New York Yankees, 6-5 today and jump their American League lead over the Yanks to a game and a half.

Consecutive singles with two out in the ninth by Hoot Evers, Gerry Priddy and Don Kolloway turned the tide. A Yankee victory would have enabled the Bombers to take the lead by a half game.

All the other runs in the game came as the result of home runs.

Tiger starting Pitcher Saul Rogovin belted a grand slam homer off Ed Lopat in the second inning to shoot the Tigers ahead, 4-0. The Yanks came back with three in the third on a three-run, inside-the-park homer by Hank Bauer and forged ahead, 6-5, in the sixth when Joe DiMaggio and Yogi Berra cracked consecutive home runs.

Johnny Lipon singled to start the ninth for the Tigers off Allie Reynolds, fourth Yank pitcher. He was forced at second by Pat Muggin who in turn was forced by George Kell. Evers and Priddy then singled to score Kell with the tying run. Joe Page relieved Reynolds and Kolloway cracked Page's pitch to center to drive home Evers with the winning run.

Art Houtteman, third Tiger flinger, retired the Yanks in order in the last of the ninth to lock up his twelfth victory.

A crowd of 59,760 fans turned out for the game to run the count for the three-game series to 165,268.

The loss snapped a six-game New York winning streak.

Dodgers Slug Pirates, 11-6

Pittsburgh, July 23 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers exploded for four runs in the eighth inning to ramble to an 11-6 win over Pittsburgh today in a wild slugfest before 25,389 fans.

The Bums combed four Pirates pitchers for 18 hits, including a three run homer by Gil Hodges in the eighth and a homer by Jackie Robinson in the ninth.

Ray Mueller hit his fourth for the Bucs with none aboard in the sixth.

For Dodges it was home run No. 13. Robinson's was his tenth. Each also had four runs batted in, Robinson connecting for two doubles and a pair of singles in addition to his four-bagger.

The Dodgers racked up two runs in the first and four in the third off Bill Werle, then gave up two each to Pittsburgh in the next three innings to knot the game.

AAU Holds Weeks Swim Meet Tonight

All but one of the winners of the 10 open events in the 1949 competition are expected to see action in tonight's eighth annual A. Earle Weeks Memorial swimming meet being staged by the District of Columbia AAU at Takoma Park pool.

Jim Thomas, the 150 backstroke and 200-yard freestyle defender from Baltimore, is competing in the men's national championships in Seattle. However, his teammate, Jess Greenbaum, will be back to defend in the 100 freestyle and Aaron Kurtzman, of Plainfield, N. J., is after his third straight 200 breaststroke victory.

Bob Lalor, young Takoma Park ace, completes the roster of men's titlists. He was the only District entry to take an open race last summer.

In the women's division every open winner is expected. Ann Moss, former junior national champion from Wheeling, W. Va., will defend in both freestyles, and Gail Peters, of Atlantic City's Brighton-Drake squad, will be on deck for the breaststroke. Backstroker Sue Fink, a Chapel Hill, N. C. girl, is a probable starter.

Swimmers from Washington who will compete are Bettie Rowland, Milton Michaels, Chick Hallock and Bill Roth of Takoma and Barbara Hobelmann, Mary Freeman, Joel Leeman, Ellen Oberti, Stan Tinkham, Barry Wall, Dan Callahan and Ted Taylor from Ambassador.

Collier Triumphs In 2 Lightning Races on Potomac

Wyse Wins First Game With Single

Philadelphia, July 23 (AP).—The Philadelphia Athletics climbed out of the American League cellar today by winning a doubleheader from the Chicago White Sox, 2-1 and 5-4.

Hank Wyse pitched and batted the A's to victory in the opener, and the A's rallied with three runs in the ninth inning to take the second.

The A's in winning took over seventh place from the St. Louis Browns, who lost to Boston.

In the opener Wyse, in addition to pitching five-hit ball, drove home the winning run with a single in the fifth inning.

Featherweight Champion Willie Pep, Who Meets Bobby Bell Tonight, Strikes a Fighting Pose

At Griffith Stadium

Pep Favored to Ring Bell Against Bobby Here Tonight

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Newlywed Willie Pep makes his first fight tonight since his recent marriage, and the party is expected to be at the expense of Bobby Bell, who asked for the invitation.

Pep, who skipped out on a July 10 engagement with Bell to keep a wedding date, is an odds-on favorite to lick the 21-year-old Ohioan who served as his sparring partner last March when the featherweight champ was training for his successful title defense against Ray Famechon.

A crowd of about 5000 is expected to sit in on the Griffith Stadium proceedings. Pep's title is not at stake, but his prestige is and wily Willie's record shows that it hasn't been messed up over a 12-year boxing career.

Pep, one of the great boxing champions, has won 150 of his 153 fights. He's seven years older than Bell, but still packs enough wallop and has enough savvy to handle the likes of Bell and others in his class without too much difficulty.

Bell will have only himself to blame for whatever happens to him tonight. He got ideas he could lick Bell when he sparred with him for two days in March and hounded his manager into arranging a scrap with Pep.

Bell is so confident he'll upset Pep's applecart he has requested the District Boxing Commission to require Pep to give him a shot at the title if he wins. The request has gone unanswered.

Bell has two things going for him tonight. He's unbeaten in the Baltimore-Washington area with five straight wins. Also, the last champion, then Bantamweight King Manuel Oritz, to fight at Griffith stadium was upset, by Jimmy Cooper, last summer. After this, Bell is on his own.

Pep will be making his third start locally. He knocked out Joe Torres in 1942 and defeated Pedro Hernandez in 1944 in Washington.

A scheduled eight-round semi-final backing up the main event brings together Gene Smith, sensational 18-year-old local featherweight, and Red Gaddis, home town rival.

Smith has won 11 straight pro bouts, eight via knockout, and previously had taken 56 of 57 as an amateur.

A pair of five-round bouts list: Andy Nathan vs. Leon Daughtry, welterweights, and Sam Kelsey vs. Van Hook, lightweights, while Battling Moore and Paul Minor, heavyweights, have been paired four rounds.

The action starts at 8:45 p. m.

Golf Round-Up

Sometimes It Pays To Hook Your Drive

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

SOMETIMES a good hook comes in handy when playing golf, and if you think it never pays to hit your drive into a grove of trees, take the case of Miss Jeanne Read.

Miss Read, a physical education instructor at Sousa Junior High, was playing golf yesterday at Fort Dupont public golf course when she hooked her drive on the ninth hole into a grove of tall trees.

Down crashed not one, but two golf balls, both in perfect condition. With a 100% return on her investment, Miss Read is considering developing her hook.

INDIAN SPRING: George Ashton made a hole-in-one yesterday on the 135-yard, par 3, fourteenth hole. He used an eight iron for the shot. Ashton was playing in a foursome with Denny Havener, Vince Yost, and Dick Kane.

Maj. John Taylor and Mildred Jorg took low gross in the mixed Scotch foursome with 79. Saul Amanuel and Mrs. Eli Amanuel and Tony Plowman and Mrs. Virginia Achen tied for low net with 63s. Mr. and Mrs. John Shaw and Jeff Long and Mrs. W. F. Patterson tied for third with net 66s.

ANACOSTIA: Bill Swan, Red Tanner, Dr. R. A. Cole and Danny Burton had a best ball 112 for 36 holes of golf, 22 under par. Tanner eagled the par four thirteenth, holing out a 40-yard chip shot, and Dr. Cole eag fifth, but in the seventh they finally broke through. Dente singled, Grasso singled and pinch-hitter Sam Mele doubled to left for one run, and Yost got another home with his infiel dout. But Coan's pop-up left Mele on base.

And if the Nats did anything worthwhile in the eighth and ninth, it went unobserved by everybody.

IN SHORT—Al Rosen took a broken nose onto the field with him yesterday. Ed Stewart's soft pop foul that Rosen lost in the glare of the lights the night before, did it . . . The three-game series with the Indians that drew 63,000 helped wipe out some of the Nats' 1950 attendance deficit . . . Eddie Stewart's failure to get a ball beyond the infield didn't help the Nats in their last two games, and Sam Mele may be restored to the outfield against all kinds of pitching . . . The Nats entrain today for a tour of the West, starting at Chicago tomorrow night. They hit Philadelphia before returning to Griffith Stadium August 10.

Vesper Wins Rowing Title

Philadelphia, July 23 (AP).—Vesper B. C. today won the Julius H. Barnes Trophy amid a series of upsets in the seventy-sixth annual National Rowing Championships on the Schuylkill.

Winning two more crowns in addition to three in Saturday's events, Vesper clinched the club crown midway through the second day's events.

Tom Smith, 19-year-old lad from Hamilton, Ontario, surprised by defeating Joe Angyal, New York fireman, by 3 feet in the 145-pound championship event. It was the first time Angyal was beaten in his favorite race since 1938. He rowed for the Leander Boat Club. Angyal represents New York A. C.

Vesper won the doubles in an upset, when Warren Neville, former Penn oarsman, and Bill Knecht teamed to beat a field of four. Nereid B. C., Belleville, N. J., was second.

The other Vesper victory was by Jack Kelly, jr., Vesper's diamond sculls winner of 1949.

Old Dominion Club 4th in Double Sculls

Philadelphia, July 2.—The Old Dominion Yacht Club of Alexandria, Va., finished fourth in the double sculls event in the seventh National Rowing Regatta here today.

Winner of the event was the Vesper Boat Club with a time of 7:06 3/5.

Savitt Wins in Tennis

Haverford, Pa., July 23 (AP).—Dick Savitt won the fifty-first annual Pennsylvania State grass courts tennis championship today, defeating Ed Moylan, 3—6, 9—11, 6—2, 6—1 and 6—2.

They Settle It Today; Barber 3d

St. Paul, Minn., July 23 (AP).—Sam Snead's ability to lay his chip shots where they count paid off today and brought him a tie with Jim Merrier of San Francisco at the end of 72 holes of play in the St. Paul Open golf tournament.

The two wound up with 72-hole totals of 276 and will play off the tie tomorrow, starting the 18 holes at 2 p. m. (CST).

Snead carded a 7-under-par 65, the third such score of the tournament today. He had a 69 yesterday, 72 the day before and 70 the first day.

Ferrier came in today with a 71, the second such score he has made in the tourney. He had a 69 yesterday and a 65 the first day.

Jerry Barber, little known Philadelphia pro, boosted himself into third money of $1400 by stroking a 72 for a 278 total.

Snead contributed perhaps the most spectacular shot of the tournament on the third hole of today's round. He hooked his second shot around a tree and it landed about 25 yards from the cup, behind a trap. His chip shot cleared the trap nicely, hit the green and rolled into the cup for a three on the par-five 533-yard hole.

The tie marked the third straight playoff needed to settle the winner of the St. Paul Open. Ferrier won the playoff in 1947 with Fred Haas, jr., of Claremont, Calif., and Jimmy Demaret of Ojai, Calif., took the 1948 playoff with Otto Greiner of Baltimore.

It will be the sizth playoff in the 18 years the event has been held.

Snead is the No. 1 money winner on the professional golfers association summer tour with winnings of $23,211.34 and Ferrier is in third place with $13,646.36. Demaret, who withdrew yesterday, is second with $14,676.16.

Snead and Ferrier will be playing to determine which gets the $2600 first money and the $1900 second prize.

Frank Stranahan of Toledo, British amateur champion, was low amateur with the same total on his 71 today.

Isaacs Shoots 71-288, Wins Virginia State Open Tourney

Danville, Va., July 23 (AP).—Jack Isaacs of Langley Field, copped his second Virginia Open golf tournament in a row when he fired a 1-over-par 71 in the final round here this afternoon for a 72-hole total of 288.

Shooting methodical and consistent golf over the last 18 holes, the sandy-haired Tidewater professional finished 3 strokes ahead of Clarence Owen of Martinsville, pace-setter after this morning's third round.

The victory was worth $550 to the defending titlist from Langley, while Owen picked up $300 for his second-place finish. Third money of $250 went to Sam Bates of Norfolk, who posted rounds of 74 and 72 today to come all the way from the eighth spot he held at the end of 36 holes.

Georges Fulton, jr., of Roanoke, won a silver trophy for the lowest amateur score with a 72-hole total of 296. Other top amateurs were Lieut. Jack Colter of Norfolk, with a 298; Johnny Whittle of Martinsville, with a 299; and Kenneth Sutton of Norfolk, with 300.

Finishing behind Bates among the professionals were Fred Main of Danville, who had a 296; Joe Cannon of Charlottesville and Nelson Broach of Hampton, with 297 each, and Tommy Card of Charlottesville, with 298.

Chevy Chase Shooter Wins

Hot Springs, Va., July 23 (AP).—J. C. Dalton, of Chevy Chase, Md., today won the fourteenth annual Clark trophy shoot on the Homestead skeet field after a spectacular three-way shoot-off.

Perfect scores of 100 were posted in the regulation firing by Dalton, J. H. Gellatly of Pittsburgh, and C. F. Crites of Detroit.

Crites was the first to drop a bird and took third position in the all-gauge event. Dalton ran 200 straight in the shoot-off before Gellatly missed a target which gave him the runner-up spot.

Gellatly otherwise displayed excellent over-all shooting. He won high over-all honors with 293x300, and he already had won the 20-gauge event held yesterday.

Marshall Sets His 4th Mark At Seattle

By Jack Hewins

Seattle, July 23 (AP). — With Yale's John Marshall pointing the way, records were bettered at three distances in today's windup of the 1950 senior men's outdoor AAU swimming championships.

In his fourth straight day of record smashing, Marshall ploughed to a 9:37.5 time in the 880-yard freestyle, knocking 17.1 seconds off the recognized world and American standard. The old mark was 9:54.6, set by Bill Smith of Hawaii in 1942.

Previously, Marshall had cracked mile and 440-yard freestyle records and swam a lap on the New Haven Swim Club's record-beating half mile relay team.

Slender Richard Cleveland of Hawaii beat the American mark in the 110-yard freestyle and James P. Thomas, University of Nofth Carolina, twice bettered the American standard for the 330-yard individual medley.

Th. clockers caught Cleveland in 58.2 seconds, two-tenths of a second faster than Otto Jaretz of Chicago swam the 110 yards in 1940.

Thomas won his heat in the morning prelims in 3:56.1 and took the finals in 3:55.1. Adolph Kiefer set the recognized record of 3:58.6 in 1940.

Thomas grabbed the lead in the breaststroke lap of the medley, held an advantage of five yards after the backstroke portion and freestyled to a 15-yard victory. Wally Wolf, Los Angeles, was second; Robert Mattson, Worcester, Mass., third, and Yoshinobu Terada, of Hawaii, fourth.

The New Haven Swim Club, sparked by Marshall and Jimmy McLane, made a runaway of the team match, scoring 55 points to win the meet.

The Coca Cola Swim Club, Cincinnati, was second with 27 points, and the California Swim Club, third, with 17.

Marshall led the individual scorers with 18 points. McLane was runner-up with 13 and Ford Konno, Hawaii, finished third with 10.

Phillips' Said It For Years...

NOW READER'S DIGEST CONFIRMS:

Mouth Acids Cause Tooth Decay!

PHILLIPS' MILK OF MAGNESIA TOOTH PASTE NEUTRALIZES MOUTH ACIDS—ON CONTACT
—because it contains one of the fastest, most effective acid neutralizers known!

Now there can be no doubt about what kind of tooth paste you should use!

Mouth acids cause tooth decay! This fact—which the makers of Phillips' Tooth Paste have been telling to all America for years—is now confirmed by Reader's Digest in an article entitled "A Sensible Way To Lessen Tooth Decay".

This Reader's Digest article also reveals that scientific tests indicate that tooth decay can be reduced 50% to 60%—by brushing your teeth and combatting these mouth acids after each meal.

This leaves no room for doubt about what kind of tooth paste you—and everyone in your family—should use. It makes it vividly clear that what you need is a tooth paste that will combat mouth acids—and do it effectively.

That means Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tooth Paste! For Phillips' Tooth Paste actually neutralizes mouth acids—neutralizes them on contact!

Yes—Phillips' Tooth Paste neutralizes mouth acids on contact. And the reason is that Phillips' Tooth Paste contains one of the fastest, most effective acid neutralizers known.

So don't let mouth acids destroy your teeth. Today, get a tube of cool, minty tasting Phillips' Tooth Paste and see for yourself how effectively it helps prevent tooth decay.

Phillips' Tooth Paste is available in 3 sizes—Medium, Large and the new, money saving Economy size.

EVERYONE HAS MOUTH ACIDS!

Reader's Digest says: "Tooth decay is not a steady wearing-away process like water dripping on stone. It is the result of a series of violent and rapid acid attacks on the teeth, each attack being like a chisel blow, nicking away a tiny speck of enamel." These acids—which cause painful, expensive cavities—develop almost invariably in everyone's mouth right after eating. Because of this, everyone in your family—children and grownups alike—should use Phillips' Tooth Paste immediately after each meal. For Phillips' Tooth Paste neutralizes these mouth acids—on contact!

Youth at Crossroads

Rejected Children Often Take to Criminal Path

Second of a Series

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

HOW DOES a child become a murderer?

There is no easy answer, say authorities here. Sometimes one's being a little less of a parent is enough to get a child to become a thug and a killer. Just to withhold love may be enough.

A slum environment helps put a youth in the shadow of the electric chair. And there are obscure factors that no one can easily explain.

When six officials dealing in Washington crime were asked how a child can become a murderer, their voices grew frigid as they gave their answers.

Dr. Leopold E. Wexberg, head of the District's mental hygiene clinic:

"Treat him with ice-cold rejection and neglect. Take away every joy and pleasure of the child. Throw his toys in the river. Deprive him of love, and force him to work. Let him witness what grownup criminals do and hear how they brag about their achievements. Develop in him the ego idea of the criminals. And I might send him to see moving pictures glorifying crime."

Harold E. Hegstrom, superintendent of the National Training School for Boys:

"I'd certainly give him no religious training. I'd make sure that he is put in a school where there are the fewest teachers for the largest number of students and where facilities are poor. I would set an example of brutality for him and practice it on him. I would put him in the slums, right in the midst of a high-delinquency area."

Donald Clemmer, head of the Department of Corrections:

"I WOULD give him no love. I'd stint on his food and clothing and teach him the only way to get ahead is to cheat. I'd convince him that people are no good. Maybe I'd show him what fun it is to twirl a cat by the tail. It shouldn't be difficult."

United States Attorney George Morris Fay:

"I would let my child run wild. I would relinquish all supervision and let him come home at any hour. Let him think that all authority had been abolished. The almost sure result would be that he will think he can get away with violating statutory authority. Make it clear that when you guide him, you do it to prevent him from having pleasure."

Gerard M. Shea, director of the Board of Public Welfare:

"Reject the child completely and neglect him. Let him think you hate him, that you favor another child. Be inconsistent in your treatment."

G. Howland Shaw, head of the Advisory Committee of Juvenile Court:

"I would subject the child to as much frustration as I could, and slowly but surely build up in him that resentment to society which is the basis of the troublemaker. I would make him feel that he is a failure and should take out his feelings on society and the members of it."

Shaw added:

"IF YOU want the answer, not from any third-rate so-called expert like myself but from someone who knows, these are the words of a 17-year-old boy who was not a serious delinquent himself but had seen many of them in his community:

"Guys who don't feel like they are counting, who are being shoved around, who feel like they are worthless to everyone, well, they are the guys who go out and try to make names for themselves by becoming stickup guys. It's on account of they feel like they are nobodies."

The authorities all acknowledged there is no complete answer.

There is the case of William A. Tyler, jr., who was convicted of first-degree murder in the "Good-Friday" boning-knife killing of two department store guards here. Before he is 20, Tyler, whose case is now being appealed, may die in the District Jail electric chair.

Tyler's case fits into none of the cases suggested by the experts who have given their views of how a child becomes a murderer. He entered on a criminal career despite the efforts of his parents who unquestionably are good people.

Dr. E. Y. Williams, Howard University psychiatrist, examined Tyler. He gave these important factors in the youth's boyhood:

"Patient is one of three siblings with an older sister and a younger brother, with parents of real solid citizenship who tried to stress right and wrong very early to patient.

"AS A CHILD, patient never liked school. As he grew older he became bored—apparently being pushed against a low I.Q. . . . He was never very sociable with other children, never mixed freely, nor played games very often, preferring to be alone . . .

"At the age of 12 years, there was a withdrawal from his family and a series of difficulties arose for which he was whipped most severely by his father, but to no avail. His mother begged him to be good, and at times his father pleaded with him so much that both would cry. He would be good for a week and then he would start getting into mischief or fights; and the reprimands or whippings would start over again.

"At about this time, he became obsessed with two ideas, having lots of money (power) and getting away from home (wanderlust). . . . At 15-16 he did his first stealing and was unsuccessful and sent to Blue Plains, but nevertheless he experienced great relief for the first time from this tension. There was no remorse or sense of guilt.

"He has had two previous commitments in Blue Plains for truancy of six months each. Patient was also charged with a traffic violation and received a suspended sentence and one of simple assault which was also dropped.

"In the past few months, he has had a peculiar manifestation of weakness and stiffness of his left side (hysteroid) associated with bell-ringing in his ears. This sound of bells would fade out to an indistinct rumbling of human voices.

"ALCOHOLISM was negligible as a factor . . . His sex life was a poor one . . . First experience was at 16 . . . The girl was 9 years his senior . . . She finally gave him up . . . He felt he could not get along without her at that moment . . . He did not care for girls after that . . . He cared for no one, liked no one, and stated he never looked forward to marrying as he liked no woman for that purpose.

"His job placement showed an inability to adjust . . . He never saved any money he made . . ."

"Punishment meted out by his father was unusually severe, and at times he entertained ideas of harming his father but never did so."

According to one person interviewed, Tyler was an excellent athlete, especially in basketball, on the playgrounds. He played hard but he played fair.

Five psychiatrists said that Tyler was legally sane. He knew the difference between right and wrong.

He is an ordinary criminal in the eyes of the law.

Job Applicants Swamp Services; Officials Unable To Interview All

Our town is busting out all over with people looking for war jobs.

More than 10,000 persons are estimated to have gone to the Pentagon last week seeking jobs in the Army, Navy, and Air Force. Officials have found it impossible to interview all of the jobhunters.

In fact, many of them have been handed notices by the Army which says it's in the market for only typists, stenographers, and clerks at the moment. Others are invited to send in applications but they are asked not to seek interviews at this time.

Civil Service reports it has received orders for substantial numbers of communications clerks, cartographic aides, draftsmen, engineers, tabulating and cardpunch operators. Requests for smaller numbers of statisticians, physicists, budget officers, illustrators, industrial analysts, intelligence analysts, and phone operators also have been filed.

The commission has been able to fill most job orders, typists and stenographers excepted. And it has this sound tip for the many thousands of jobseekers: File applications for Civil Service exams as they are announced.

The war agencies will use Civil Service registers to fill jobs as long as qualified people are available on them. They are in the open market for typists and stenographers only now and it may be clerks very soon. So, your best bet now for a job is Civil Service clearance.

Meantime, it's reported that several other agencies either have or plan to ask Civil Service for emergency powers to hire employes—a return to the war service system. Among them are reported to be the State Department, Coast Guard, National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, and the National Security Resources Board.

A week ago, the commission agreed to give this sweeping hiring authority to the Defense Department, Army, Navy, and Air Force. These agencies, however, have continued to take most of their new people from Civil Service registers.

Civil Service Chairman Harry B. Mitchell is sending his employes a plea today to give the defense agencies every possible need in working out their personnel problems.

JOB NEWS: The hourly rate for printer and proofreader jobs in the Government Printing Office here has been boosted from $2.38 to $2.43 . . . An exam for nurses to fill jobs in the Bureau of Indian Affairs, $3825 to start, will be announced soon . . . Also coming up are exams for engineers ($4600 to $5400) to fill jobs in the Reclamation Bureau, and therapists, $3825 to $6400, to fill openings in Federal hospitals . . . A test for social workers, $4600 to $7600, to fill Federal Security vacancies also will be announced soon . . . The Naval Air Station at Patuxent River, Md., has tests open for: Cable splicer, $8.48 to $13.28 a day; radio mechanic helper, $8.48 to $9.44, and roofer, $11.36 to $12.32 . . . The Dahlgren (Va.) Proving Ground has a test open for transportation jobs, $4472 to $4784 a year.

FIRINGS: Civil Service today told Federal agencies, in effect, that they were the ones to blame for the red tape and delay in the firing of incompetent workers.

It said that the law governing the firing of unsatisfactory employes was simple and direct, except when veterans are involved. But the commission added that the legal requirements had been complicated by some agencies "by unduly time-consuming procedures and appeals."

The commission suggested that agencies review their appeal procedures; it offered to cooperate with agencies in promoting speedy and effective practices for the removal of undesirable employes, and it urged that probational employes be "fully appraised" and fired before they are given permanent status unless they meet job standards. It also advised agencies not to try to fire poor employes through the cumbersome process of giving them unsatisfactory efficiency ratings.

Hershey Gets Regional Role In Red Cross

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, has been appointed chairman of the Governmental Recruiting Committee for the Red Cross Washington regional blood program, J. Clifford Folger, chairman of the District Chapter of the Red Cross, has announced.

General Hershey served as chairman for Montgomery County, Md., during the 1950 fund drive.

"General Hershey's knowledge of Red Cross and its importance in the community makes him a valuable addition to the blood program, and we are deeply grateful to him for his cooperation in filling this assignment," Folger said.

From July, 1949, through June, 1950, the District Blood Center distributed 29,601 pints of blood, Folger said.

The District Blood Center, 1730 E st. nw., covers an area including Washington and 17 counties in Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia. The Bloodmobile crisscrosses the area periodically.

"With General Hershey and his committee striving for a greater donor participation among Government groups and other committees working in the same direction in other organizations, we hope to meet the blood needs in the region," Folger said.

Respite Over, D. C. Mercury To Rise Again

Yesterday's pleasant summer weather, unfortunately, won't continue today, the Weather Bureau lamented.

Yesterday's temperature hit 80 at 12:40 p. m., and never went higher. "Normal" for the date is 86.6. The low—64 degrees at 6:40 a. m.—was 3.7 degrees below normal.

As for the humidity, it also was low. The 80-degree high temperature was matched by a humidity of 39 percent.

The clouds kept the temperature down, and so did a cool breeze of 10 miles an hour.

But beginning today and lasting through Tuesday, at least, high humidity and uncomfortable weather will return to the District, say the forecasters.

After an overnight low of 67 degrees, the day's high will be in the lower eighties.

With Gulf States weather flowing into Washington, the day is due to be cloudy and more humid, with scattered showers likely by afternoon or evening.

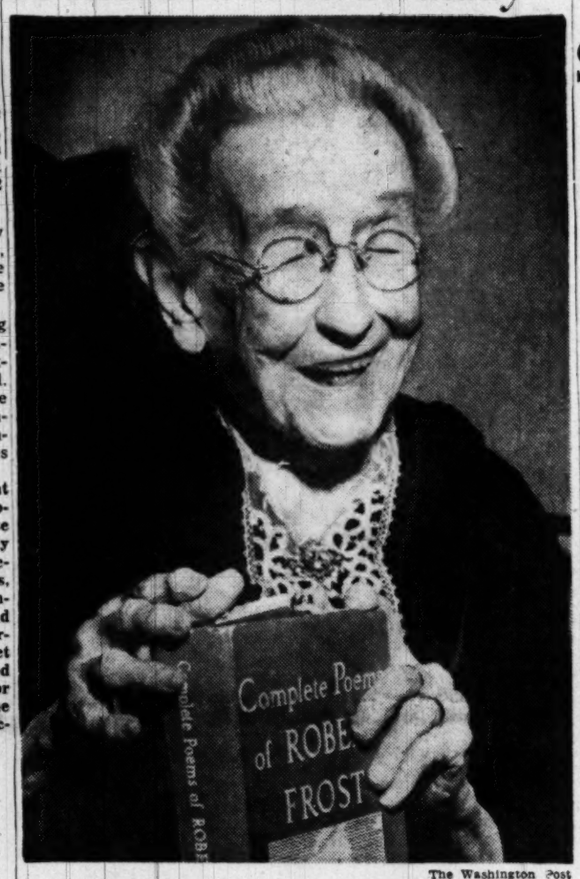
Woman Memorizing Poems To Recite on 100th Birthday



The Washington Post

CENTENARIAN—Mrs. Abbie Cleaveland with copy of Frost

The first 100 years are the hardest, but Mrs. Abbie Cleaveland is making the ninety-ninth even harder by memorizing several Robert Frost poems for recitation at her 100th birthday party Saturday.

A century is a long time on this "good old earth," but Mrs. Cleaveland has enjoyed each one of the years to the hilt.

She radiated this yesterday as she sat with her daughter, Mrs. Elon G. Salisbury at 614 Flower ave., Takoma Park, Md., enthusiastically planning the party. Birthdays and parties are a joy to Mrs. Cleaveland, even her 100th.

"I am a very social being. I do enjoy company," the gentle, white-haired woman declared emphatically.

At her 99th party last year, Mrs. Salisbury gave her a copy of Robert Frost's poems. The selection was a happy one.

Mrs. Cleaveland considers Frost American's greatest poet. This opinion may be colored by the fact that she attended school in Lowell, Mass., with Frost's father and met the poet-son several times.

Yesterday she quickly offered to demonstrate how her memorizing has gone forward and recited as enthusiastically as the most facile eight-year-old, a smile crinkling her face as she did so. Saturday she will give a repeat performance for a larger audience of relatives.

Another idol—in the musical field—is Jascha Heifetz. A few years ago, he made her 96th year an unforgettable one, by dedicating a number over a radio program to her.

Until this year, Mrs. Cleaveland has put many youngsters to shame by her activity. But now: "I miss my shopping. I need some things and it is hard for anyone else to select them."

And then there's canoeing on the C. & O. Canal with her daughter and son-in-law; and knitting. These are out—reluctantly—for this is a woman who spent her eightieth birthday on a steamer going to Europe and her seventy-fifth "sitting in on classes" at the University of Illinois, where her daughter was taking graduate work.

This 85-pound, 5-foot centenarian would like to do a couple of things before long. One is to make her first flight in an airplane and the other is to see the new film, "Fifty Years Before Your Eyes."

If a couple of alert press agents see this, her birthday Saturday should be complete.

Dr. Alphonse H. Clemens of the sociology department, Catholic University, will give a talk, "Are Cooperatives the Answer to Our Economic Problems?" at an open forum at the St. Peter Claver Center, 1513 U st. nw., at 8 o'clock tonight.

During World War II, Dr. Clemens served with the War Labor Board in St. Louis. He is past president of the American Catholic Sociological Association, and active in the Catholic Economic Association.

Boy 'Solons' 'Investigate' Sen. Mundt

Youthful Committee Fires Questions for 2 Hours in 'Probe' Of Communism

By S. L. Fishbein
Post Reporter

The tables were turned last night on Senator Karl E. Mundt (R., S. Dak.).

The famed congresional investigator found himself investigated for two warm hours by the judiciary committee of the Boys' Senate in open session at the Fort Myer gym.

The boys, taking part in the American Legion's fifth annual Boys' Nation, wanted the senator's views on a Communist-control bill they're considering. Senator Mundt is co-author of a similar bill awaiting action in his own Congress.

Unlike some witnesses before his committees, Senator Mundt didn't stand on his constitutional rights. His answers were quick and to the point.

Plenty of Notes Taken

For about 40 minutes, Senator Mundt explained what he thought Communism is and is not, and how a communist-control bill would bring it all into the open. His definitions were faithfully recorder in many a notebook.

Then the sweating senator shed his coat and let the queries fly. The committee members, averaging about 17 years old, had dozens of them. Here are some samples:

Q. What are the arguments against the bill?

A. The Reds wrongfully insist it is unconstitutional ;and a few "misguided, synthetic liberals, pseudo-progressives, bleeding hearts say you shouldn't legislate against a political party—but it's not a political party."

Q. Do you think, if the bill is passed, the Reds might cause deliberate confusion by claiming many non-Communist liberals for their own?

A. We have to keep trying to plug up any loopholes in the bill when they crop up.

What About Sabotage?

Q. Do you think the bill would drive Communists so far underground they'd become physically dangerous and commit sabotage?

A. No Communist will become dangerous unless ordered to by Moscow.

Q. Are people in Communist countries happy?

A. Like animals, some of them that never knew any better, are happy. Those who have seen the outside are not.

Q. How long will it be before the communist-control bill is passed in Congress?

A. That is one question I wish I could answer.

A prolonged ovation accompanied the star witness as he left the stand. The Boys' Senate will act on the bill Tuesday.

Today the boys are to tour the FBI, the Pentagon, listen to the secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force, and Attorney General J. Howard McGrath. Tonight they'll have dinner with newspaper and radio reporters.

Father Found Shot To Death After Phoning Daughter

Richard J. Voigt, 44, was found dead last night with a pistol bullet in his head beside an open telephone at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Voigt of 4220 Jenifer st. nw.

Detective Sergt. Walter Cook said that Voigt, a plumber, apparently shot himself after telling his daughter, Dolores, of his intention over the phone.

His 20-year-old daughter told police she heard the shot while at her mother's home, 3618 S. Kemper rd., Arlington. The Voigts had been separated more than a year, Cook said, but had met yesterday afternoon.

Cook said Voigt was trying to call his wife, Carrie, and reached his daughter instead. A son, Joseph, jr., 22, also survives.

Boy Killed As Bicycle Hits Truck

Leonard Baker, 15, Dies of Broken Neck; Two Youths Badly Hurt in Accident

Fifteen-year-old Leonard Baker of Route 2, Gaithersburg, Md., was killed near Gaithersburg yesterday morning when he ran his bicycle into the side of a truck, police said.

The boy was dead on arrival at Montgomery County General Hospital, Ashton, Md. Police said death was caused by a broken neck.

The driver of the truck, Samuel Eugene Johnson, 22, of Route 3, Gaithersburg, was booked on a technical charge of manslaughter. He was released under $500 bond for an appearance in Rockville Police Court at 9:30 a. m. Thursday.

Near Gaithersburg

Police said the accident occurred about 8:30 a. m. as the youngster pedaled his bike from Waters la., near Gaithersburg, onto Etchison-Unity rd.

Two Youths Badly Hurt

Two Leonardtown, Md., youths were in critical condition in Gallinger Hospital last night, suffering from severe head injuries received in an auto accident on the Eagle Harbor rd., near Aquasco in Prince Georges County, Md.

Maryland State troopers identified the youths as Rudell Johnson, 16, and Eugene Young, 17. Their auto apparently went out of control and off the road, police said.

A quick stop by a Capital Transit bus, driven by Calvin D. Pierey, 26, of Greenbelt, Md., last night saved a 3-year-old boy from serious injury. The child, Robert Householder, of 220 V st. ne., had run into the vehicle and was knocked underneath, between the wheels.

The accident happened in front of 69 Rhode Island ave. nw., where Robert was trying to cross the street to join his father, Arthur Householder.

Suffer Fractured Leg

Kenneth Mallory, 21, of 216½ 12th pl. ne., a soldier stationed at Ft. Dix, N. J., was injured about 5:15 p. m. yesterday when he lost control of his motorcycle, police reported. Mallory was admitted to Casualty Hospital with a fractured right leg. He told police his motorcycle skidded at 34th and Clay sts. ne., and struck a parked car.

Sidney H. Truesdale, 27, of 1207 4th st. nw., was injured about 2:15 p. m. when he was struck by a car in front of his home.

Police said charges were not filed against the driver of the car, Frederick T. Owen, 49, of 112 Varnum st. nw. Truesdale was admitted to Freedmen's Hospital for observation.

Md. County Rule Forum Set

A public forum on "The Manager versus the Commission Form of County Administration" will be held at 2 p. m. Wednesday. It will be open to all Prince Georges County residents, the Citizens Committee for Good Government has announced.

Ranking leaders of the Republican and Democratic Parties in the county will speak at the debate, to be held in the central auditorium of the Maryland University Education Building.

Scheduled speakers are State Senator L. Harold Sothoron and Prince Georges County Attorney Jerrold V. Powers, both Democrats, favoring the commission form; John Raymond Fletcher, chairman of the county's Republican State Central Committee, and John F. Lillard, jr., member of Republican Platform Committee, both in favor of the manager administration plan.

Moderator will be Prof. Christian L. Larsen, director of the Maryland University Bureau of Public Administration.

The debate will be recorded for broadcast at 5:30 p. m. on Sunday, July 30, over Radio Station WGAY.

The program is the first in a series of town hall debates scheduled by the Citizens Committee for Good Government, on the same subject, according to its chairman, William R. Turner.

Sea Jeep Makes 4th Around-World Try

Halifax, Nova Scotia, July 23 (AP). A seagoing jeep, outfitted and weatherproofed in Arlington, Va., is carrying a young couple who, for the fourth time, are trying to cruise around the world the hard way.

Ben Carlin, Australian-born New Yorker, and his Bostonian wife reported by radio today they were about 350 miles from Halifax and were going "swimmingly."

The Carlins started their perilous trip Wednesday. They slipped out of the harbor without telling authorities of their plans to sail and drive their 24-foot vehicle around the world.

The vehicle is named "The Half Safe." It carries a 10-watt radio, a message from which was picked up today by a Royal Canadian Air Force "ham" operator. The duck is carrying a 50-gallon water tank, a plentiful food supply, and is towing a fuel tank.

The Carlins hope to reach the Azores in three weeks.

Carlin bought the duck from the Army for $901. In 1947, in Arlington, he spent many hours and $9000 to convert it.

The Carlin's first attempt was in June, 1948, when they got 200 miles offshore before developing rudder trouble. In another try they were halted 80 miles out with a leaking exhaust pipe. Their third attempt ended last September when they lost two spare gas tanks 35 miles from Halifax.

Carlin plans to travel 25,771 miles in six months by water and land.

Nuptial Crime

Wife-Slayer Is Paroled After 31 Yrs.

Annapolis, Md., July 23 (AP).—Governor Lane today paroled a 67-year-old man who had served 31 years of a life sentence for strangling his wife on their honeymoon.

Carlyle P. Webster of Deals Island, Md., was among 19 convicts freed today. Lane also commuted the sentences of four others.

Wester was arrested in 1918 and charged with murdering his third wife in a Baltimore hotel. They were married on a Friday. She was killed the next night.

He was convicted by the Baltimore criminal court in 1919 and sentenced to life imprisonment in the Maryland Penitentiary.

Among other commutations were:

Michael C. Vurchio, 20, Montgomery County Circuit Court, 29 months, reformatory, assault and robbery. Served 17 months. Released to face charge of highway robbery by Virginia authorities.

Charles Little, jr., 21, Howard County Circuit Court, 10 years, reformatory, attempted robbery with a deadly weapon. Served three years. Released to face charge of store holdup by Virginia authorities.

Among other paroles were:

John A. Anderson, 22, Prince Georges County Circuit Court, six years, reformatory, robery. Served one year.

Robert F. Lowry, 20, Prince Georges County Circuit Court, three years, reformatory, storehouse breaking. Served one year.

Herbert Thompson, 17, Frederick County Magistrate's Court, one year, house of correction, larceny. Served four months.

Herbert T. Weems, 28, Prince Georges County Circuit Court, three years, house of correction, storehouse breaking. Served one year.

Mrs. Timberlake was born near Port Royal, Va., and attended schools in Virginia. Her husband, John D. Timberlake, was an insurance salesman here. He died in 1942.

She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Zera E. Bolin, of San Francisco; Mrs. Alfred J. Stamm, Madison, Wisc., and Mrs. Forrest A. Ford, 5406 3d st. nw.; a brother, R. E. Calliss, Harrisonburg, Va.; a sister, Mrs. E. L. Greenman, Binghamton, N. Y., and five grandchildren.

Carl A. Jones Dies Unexpectedly in N. Y.

New York, July 23 (AP).—Carl A. Jones, 67, president of the firm which publishes the Johnson City, Tenn., Press-Chronicle, fell dead tonight in the dining room of the Park Sheraton Hotel.

His son, Carl A. Jones, jr., is publisher of the Press-Chronicle.

Police said the elder Jones registered at the hotel earlier today for a three-day business visit.

He was dining with a party of seven friends when he collapsed.

Cause of death was not given by police.

Walter Reed Widow Dead; Rites Tuesday

Mrs. Emilie Lawrence Reed, 94, widow of Dr. Walter Reed, died yesterday at her home in Blue Ridge Summit, Pa. She had been ill several years.

Her husband, for whom Walter Reed Hospital here was named, headed a medical commission sent to Cuba in 1899 to investigate the cause of yellow fever. His discovery that the disease is carried by mosquitoes led to the eradication of yellow fever in most of the Western Hemisphere.

Mrs. Reed was born in Murfreesboro, N. C., and attended schools there. He parents were John and Hannah Rea Lawrence. She married Dr. Reed in 1876.

At that time Dr. Reed was stationed at Fort Apache in the Arizona territory. To join her husband, Mrs. Reed made a two-month trip west by boat, train and covered wagon.

After Dr. Reed's death in 1902, Mrs. Reed lived for many years at the Cairo and Burlington Hotels. Ten years ago she retired to her home in Pennsylvania, where she was well-known for her luxurious gardens.

Mrs. Reed is survived by a son, Maj. Gen. Walter Lawrence Reed, retired Inspector General of the Army, 2810 36th pl. nw.; a daughter, Miss Blossom Reed of Blue Ridge Summit; and two granddaughters, Mrs. Daisy Reed Royce, Fort Riley, Kans., and Mrs. Landon Reed Monro, Singapore, Malaya.

Funeral services will be held in Blue Ridge Summit Tuesday. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

State Funeral Planned For Mackenzie King

Ottawa, July 23 (AP).—A state funeral will be held on Wednesday for former Prime Minister William Lyon Mackenzie King, 75, whose service to Canada as chief of state was the longest ever recorded in the entire British Commonwealth.

The body will rest in state in Canada's Parliament for 24 hours preceding the funeral.

A service will be held in the former Prime Minister's church at Ottawa, St. Andrew's Presbyterian. The body will be taken by train to Toronto for burial in Mount Pleasant Cemetery beside his father and mother and brother.

King died last night at his Kingsmere summer home in the Gatineau Hills, 20 miles north of Ottawa.

King, a bachelor, had few relatives. At his bedside when he died were three nephews, John Lay of Toronto, Harry Lay of St. Adele, Que., and Arthur King of Toronto. His nearest relative, a sister, Mrs. H. M. Lay, Barrie, Ont., was unable to reach Ottawa in time.

King, senior statesman of the Commonwealth from point of view of years in office, was Prime Minister from December 1921, to November 1948, in an almost unbroken series of terms.

President Truman in Washington expressed personal sorrow yesterday over the death of King.

He declared that in the long-time leader of Canadian public life "freedom loving peoples and democratic institutions found an unwavering champion."

J. E. Huddleston Dies; Funeral Set for Tuesday

Funeral services for James E. Huddleston, sr., 69, former circulation employe of Washington newspapers, will be held at 11 a. m. Tuesday at the Lee funeral home, 4th st. and Massachusetts ave. ne. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mr. Huddleston died of a cerebral hemorrhage Saturday at his home, 1309 F st. ne.

A native of Bowling Green, Ky., Mr. Huddleston worked for the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railroad in Nashville before coming to Washington 35 years ago.

He was manager of Medical Cosmetics, Inc., when he retired about five years ago.

Mr. Huddleston was financial secretary of the Eastern Presbyterian Church and a past noble grand of the Columbia Lodge of Odd Fellows.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Edith B. Huddleston; a son, James E. Huddleston, jr., Milwaukee; two daughters, Edith M. Huddleston, Princeton, N. J., and Shirley Huddleston, New York City, and a sister, Mrs. Maude Merriman, Macon, Ga.

Miss Hammer Dies; Was Federal Employe

Miss Margaret M. Hammer, 62, a native of Washington and Government employe for 32 years, died yesterday at Providence Hospital after an illness of less than two weeks. She lived at 2123 I st. nw.

Miss Hammer was employed by the Veteran Administration's regional office here for 32 years. She was an active member of the Sergeant Jasper Unit of the American Legion Auxiliary and a member of St. Stephen's Church, 25th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw.

She is survived by a brother, Edward Ryan Hammer of the Kennedy-Warren Apartments.

Requiem mass will be said at St. Stephen's Church Tuesday at 9 a. m. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

E. C. Sams Dead at 66; Chain Store Executive

New Rochelle, N. Y., July 23 (AP). Earl C. Sams, 66, chairman of the board of the J. C. Penney Co. department store chain, died today at New Rochelle Hospital.

A native of Simpton, Kas., Sams joined with the chain's founder, J. C. Penny, in opening the company's first store in 1907 at Kemmerer, Wyo.

He is survived by his widow, the former Lula Ammerman of Oklahoma City, and two daughters, Mrs. Dean R. Porter and Mrs. Larry F. Lightner, both of Brownsville, Tex.

Col. Leasure, Veteran of 2 Wars, Dies

Col. Shelby C. Leasure, sr. (ret.), 72, of 3601 Connecticut ave. nw., a veteran of more than 30 years' Army service, died at Walter Reed Hospital Saturday after a long illness.

Born in Illinois, Colonel Leasure enlisted in the Army on May 12, 1898, and retired October 30, 1929.

He was a sergeant-major in the Spanish-American War, and saw service in the Veracruz Expedition of 1914. For 18 months before World War I, he was professor of military science and tactics at Rutgers University.

In World War I, he organized the Fifth Marchine-gun Battalion, the first machine-gun unit to leave the United States. He then served on the staff of General Pershing.

Colonel Leasure commanded the Twenty-first and Twenty-seventh Regiments from 1921 to 1924.

After his retirement, he lived in California and Florida. He came to Washington 15 months ago.

Colonel Leasure was an honor graduate of the Infantry-Cavalry School, and was graduated from the Staff College. He was a member of the Army and Navy Club and the Military Order of the Carabao.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Katherine Leasure; a daughter, Mrs. Francis M. Hickey, both of the Connecticut ave. address, and a son, Lieut. Comdr. Shelby C. Leasure, jr., USS Des Moines.

McKinsey Dies; Wrote for Sun In Baltimore

Baltimore, July 22 (AP).—Folger McKinsey, creator and author of the "Good Morning" column in the Baltimore Sun under the pseudonym of the "Bentztown Bard," died tonight in his home on the Magothy River. He was 83, and had been ill for some time.

Mr. McKinsey had been associated with the Sun since 1906, but his column of light verse and comment had not appeared for some time. His last original column appeared on May 6, 1948, and from that time until May 15, 1949, it contained only excerpts from previous writings.

He attained national recognition in his writings on the Maryland scene.

He was born in Elkton, Md., August 29, 1866, and began his newspaper career at Ocean Beach, N. J., where he was editor of the Shore Gazette.

He was on the staff of the Daily News in Frederick, Md., from 1886 to 1898 and came to Baltimore to join the editorial staff of the Baltimore News in 1898.

He also was on the staff of The Washington Post for a short time.

Mr. McKinsey's poems were inspired by Maryland's valleys, the Chesapeake Bay, the seasons of the year, old pianos, the Preakness, travel, towns, mint juleps andother subjects.

He transferred to the Justice Department and worked on some of the Nation's biggest cases for the Federal Bureau of Investigation. He devoted three years to getting the goods on Gaston B. Means, a famous swindler, in what was probably his most publicized case.

L. C. Wheeler, Nemesis Of Gaston Means, Dies

Los Angeles, July 23 (AP).—Lucien C. Wheeler, 73, who headed the White House Secret Service staff during the tenure of four Presidents, died today.

Born in Mechanicsville, Iowa, Wheeler was a star athlete at Notre Dame, where he took a law degree. He entered the Secret Service in 1907 and was in charge of the White House security detail during the terms of Presidents Theodore Roosevelt, Taft, Wilson and Harding.

How to Get a Husband

Choice of Bait Must Vary With the Type

This is the second of 17 articles.

By Cora Carlyle

BE it deep-sea or stream fishing, a real angler knows what attracts each type of fish. He entices with either natural or artificial bait because, in the final analysis, if the first isn't attracted to the lure, he won't even bite. The fisherman also knows one type of fish must be hauled in as soon as its nibble is felt, while another kind must be played for a long time before it is drawn in. Timing is an important element in all fishing. And remember that the experienced angler never scorns artifice if it is artifice that nets him what he wants.

Every girl has the natural bait to attract a man, but landing him as a husband is a more complicated story. While she may know the value of make-up, she must clearly understand that eye-shadow, mascara, rouge are superficial artifices. The more subtle bait calls for a studied technique based on the habits and temperament of the individual man. Therefore, it's foolish to fish in the sea of matrimony without the right bait and the right line.

To help you understand the outstanding characteristics of each type of man we are going to divide men into certain classifications. Unfortunately, we can't describe each type down to the last detail, so you'll know what brand of cigarettes he smokes. But we hope to expose some vulnerable spots and advise special techniques that should be useful in your encounters with the opposite sex. Our chief aim is to help you speed your romance to the altar by giving you the right line. . . .

Mr. Pleased-to-Meet-You

NOW on to our types. We list the Rotarian first because we rank him first in approachability. A "sportsman" may get a greater thrill from shooting a bird on the wing than from a set shot, but if you are not intent on expert marksmanship, this bird is your best bet. Remember your aim on graduation day is not to win medals but merely to get your diploma—the marriage certificate.

Even though this prospect's work is his principal interest, he has always understood that getting married to an eligible girl is the first step toward establishing his position as a pillar of society. He sees you in a frilly white apron serving highballs to the men from the office. He visualizes a Sunday morning walking down Main Street with you on his arm and Junior, always an image of him, in the carriage. He dreams that your cake with the cocoanut frosting will win the prize at the church festival.

This chap, Mr. Pleased-to-Meet-You, has one outstanding trait—his conventionality. He loathes sloppiness in speech and dress almost as much as he detests anything that is in the least bit unusual or bizarre. He doesn't like to be startled either by a dramatic outfit or by a slangy expression. If he invites you to an informal day in the country, don't wear slacks. He thinks slacks are all right, but not on his prospective wife.

If it's the Club Dance he is taking you to, don't affect a heavy, bold make-up and exotic dress. His conception of a girl at a dance has been drawn from the calendar that hung in his mother's kitchen. It isn't wise to pepper your conversation with "damn," "hell," or other profanities. In the locker room and with the boys, Mr. Rotarian will laugh as loudly as the next fellow at an obscene joke, but he'll consider a "darn" degrading from the lips of a fair, young lady.

Despite his romantic notions, Mr. Pleased-to-Meet-You is a practical fellow. But don't let this cold fact throw you; be a good saleswoman and drag out the wares you know will attract him. Subtly play up your advantages; social position, education, prominent friends or anything else that will indicate to him your fitness to be a good wife, mother and housekeeper.

To share his future with you, you must bear investigation. So be Mrs. Pinkerton for him and give him these facts with charm and innocent eyes. Make him understand that you would be a very practical appliance to have around the house. He'll begin to feel that if he added you to his television set and other gadgets, his home would be a veritable paradise. He'll start to visualize the heights of success to which he can climb with such a gem as you at his side. Girls, the setting is there.

Does Mr. Pleased-to-Meet-You sound dull? Yes, but remember, that with him as the breadwinner, you'll never go unfed or unclothed. His wife must be dressed in a style that fits his position. This is the fellow who owns a fine car and a comfortable house. He may not stimulate you intellectually, but your mind will be at rest about the mortgage on the house.

He may not be your idea of the Great Lover, but you won't weep into your pillow because you suspect that he is flirting with the Town Widow. He may put his foot down when you want to send Junior to the Progressive school, but his solidity will stand you in good stead when the rest of the world seems tottering.

Still another word. Since this man is inclined to follow his normal and healthy instincts, he does not waste his youth chasing rainbows, but quickly finds himself a wholesome mate. If you are the very young woman who desires marriage, do not scorn this substantial male. You may have silly illusions of meeting your favorite movie actor or crooner, but these are dreams, while Mr. Pleased-to-Meet-You is alive and lives right next door. He may not fulfill that romantic fantasy you are having, but in the long run he will always be at your side. This fine, upstanding average American has many virtues. Go and get him!

Mama's Boy Rates Next

MAMA'S boy we list second because he is the most common garden variety of confirmed bachelor. He still has the contented, self-satisfied expression of the baby who has eaten as much of his cereal as he wanted and then threw his spoon on the floor.

Somewhere lurking in the background is the real villain of this story—Mama—who has never permitted Sonny to emerge from the diaper stage. She tried to keep Sonny as long as possible at the age of little Lord Fauntleroy with curls. Peter Pan collar, droopy drawers and patent-leather shoes with pearl buttons. Mama earned her place among the heroes of the world when she bravely placed Sonny in the barber's chair for his first hair cut. The tears overflowed as the last curl dropped on the floor.

This is how we explain that Sonny's loves couldn't mature and were aborted before they reached a serious stage. It doesn't matter if he's president of a large corporation, a burly truck driver or the governor of the State; emotionally, he's still a puppy and not even house-broken.

This type of man demands the same attention as a new-born babe. While he may wear a size 44 suit now, he expects the same breathless attention to every word he utters as he got from his first 'Ma Ma.' As a rule, Sonny has an excessive love for physical comforts. The memory of the warmth of the cradle is a deep and never forgotten one. Mama's Boy dislikes being exposed to severe cold and other discomforts of the outdoors. He will take it as a personal affront if a mean, old mosquito dares to attack him and abscond with one drop of his precious blood.

As the big event of mother's day was feeding the proper nourishment to Sonny, you will be expected to choose the specialties on the menu with similar devotion and concentration. This man (in case you've forgotten that he is a man) will never fill his own bathtub, screw the cap back on the toothpaste or hang up his clothes. Mama always waited on him and he will expect his wife to do the same. Obviously, the only technique is to supplant Mama by becoming a mother to him in the role of a wife.

Don't think you can satisfy him with only attention, as he also has a constant need for praise. The birth of this son was Mama's great moment. Her gratitude for this phenomenon was expressed by continuous approbation of Sonny's every act and word. While Ma doesn't exactly go down on her knees and say 'Allah' to herald his entrance into a room, secretly she wouldn't be at all surprised if everyone else did. It's simple to see why this man can't function without adoration. Give to him or you won't be able to take Mama's place.

In spite of these comments, men like Mama's boy are capable of great achievement in the business and artistic world. It is only in some area of emotional development that the umbilical cord was never entirely severed. At home with Mama or you, they demand the attention and love that generally goes with the romper stage.

If you are the gal with a strong mothering instinct, you will be attracted to this type and will receive a great deal of pleasure out of being on the giving side. When you become wife and mother to Sonny Boy, you will be first, last and always the dominant factor in his life.

The Athletic Type

THE Athletic Type is listed next because he stands in great contrast to the Mama's boy. For instance, unlike Sonny, he makes a great point of ignoring the elements and like the postman—neither rain, snow nor sleet can deter him from his appointments on the links.

No matter what his size, muscle bulge or chest expansion, he considers himself Herculean. His vanity lies in his achievements in his favorite sport. If you want to make him happy, lead him on to the subject. You might as well, because he'll get there, anyway. With great enthusiasm, he will tell you the endless details of his last sports triumph. It may be about an impossible birdie from the rough, or his blow-by-blow encounter with a barracuda, or the murderous backhand smash at the net.

Despite his ambitions in the business world, the Athlete dreams of thrilling an excited crowd—straining at the ropes—in a golf tournament or of receiving the plaudits of a record breaking crowd at the tennis matches. You must become his audience. In you, he hopes to find 10,000 admirers. In this way, your importance to him is enlarged and it's not even done with mirrors. It's all in his mind. At first, he will take it impersonally as if your praise was just a write-up by an appreciative reporter on the sport page. Later, he will learn to associate your admiration with you. Result?—in his eyes, you're a wonderful sport and an understanding woman.

Not only the Athlete but most men follow the sport pages of our newspapers with more interest than the editorial sheets. They may not know who the Congressman from their district is, but they will astonish you by remembering the batting averages of every member of the favorite ball team for the last 10 years. The Athlete, of course, has a greater interest, which will continue to his dying day. So read the sport pages in your newspaper. Surprise him with an intelligent comment about the latest development in the sports world.

The theory that men find women's ignorant and foolish questions cute is passe. To the athletic man, it's sacrilegious not to know the difference between a niblick and a spoon. He may be patient at the beginning but after the first feeble glow of male superiority flickers out, irritation quickly sets in as he tries to explain the fundamentals of any sport. With a little effort, you should be able to master the rules of any game. Whether it's ice hockey, tennis, baseball, football or a polo match, he won't be amused if you call a no-hit game, a love set, or a successful foul shot in basketball—a hole-in-one.

Athletes may have the same general interests, but there is one characteristic which is not true of all. Teaching will interest one kind of athlete and will irritate another. As your boy friend won't be too secretive about his feelings on this score, you can avoid the error of letting the non-teaching type try even once.

We have witnessed several budding romances strangled in their infancy by the warranted or unwarranted impatience involved in teaching the straight left arm swing in golf. The non-teaching Athlete has none of the crusader spirit in his soul. He doesn't care if you never learn to swing a golf club. He would much prefer to take you to a practice range, seat you in a chair, and let you enjoy the privilege of watching him drive a bucket of balls away out on the fairway.

Now, let's dig beneath the skin of the teaching athlete whose ego is enlarged as he imparts his knowledge to you. If you have any aptitude for the game, he'll thrill to your progress. If it's tennis, he'll swell and burst with pride as your serve improves. He'll really believe he's accomplished wonders when he's taught you a good net game. May God give you strength because the Athlete is generally tireless, but playing games with this type is a sure-fire technique.

You'll Feel Cooler When You Shed Those Extra Pounds

By Ida Jean Kain

WHY do overweights wilt faster and need to mop their brows more in hot weather than less solid citizens? It's this way . . .

The body is a heat machine and goes right along generating heat internally regardless of weather. So in hot weather the need is to get rid of body heat. And that is where excess fat proves a hindrance, for fat, being a poor conductor of heat, serves as a blanket. In other words, the fat-packing acts as insulation in reverse by preventing the normal escape of body heat.

IDA JEAN KAIN

Overweights usually eat more food as a matter, of course, which means the body is producing and throwing off more heat, perspiring the while. And since right after a meal there is an increase in heat production, overweights feel extremely uncomfortable in hot weather, particularly after eating a big meal.

Taking all things together, it seems only sensible to cut down on concentrated fuel foods in summer. If the calories are sufficiently low, this will not only prove cooling, but will help reduce the surplus fat.

A note from a successful reducer urges me to keep right on giving good advice to overweights, and particularly to stress the timeliness of starting slimming in summer . . .

"Last July I came home from a picnic where I had as usual eaten far too much. A storm was threatening and the air was humid and oppressive . . . I was so hot and uncomfortable I felt I couldn't bear it. I sat fanning myself with the newspaper, idly glanced at it and spotted your column for that day . . . 'Why fat people suffer more in hot weather.' I had read your column many times without acting on it, but that one struck me as being written to ME. I read and re-read it, and that day made up my mind that this was the last summer I was ever going to have to suffer like this.

"I went on the 'light summer fare' you suggested, and carried on with low calorie menus in the fall. I'll admit it was tough at first for I love to eat, but this past year I took off those 50 extra pounds that had been making me miserable for so long. My doctor assures me this has added many extra years of healthful living to my life. My husband is so proud of me, and I find my daughters urge me to go places with them now when before they hadn't. Tell your overweights it is more than worth it, and to start this summer."

Right! On with summer slimming . . .

Duer McLanahan, Jr., to Marry Theodosia Knapp in Autumn

MRS. WALTER RUSSELL HERRICK of New York and Watch Hill, R. I., announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Theodosia Burr Knapp, to Duer McLanahan, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Duer McLanahan of Washington and Watch Hill.

The bride-elect is the daughter of the late Harry Kearsarge Knapp of New York, and the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kearsage Knapp of New York, and of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Norton Mann of Troy, N. Y.

Miss Knapp, a debutante of 1947, was graduated from Chopin School and Westover College. Mr. McLanahan, who is now on active duty in the Naval Reserve, is a graduate of Phillips Academy and Yale University. His grandparents are the late Mr. and Mrs. George X. McLanahan of New Haven, Conn., and Washington, and Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Neidringhaus of St. Louis, Mo.

The marriage will take place in the fall.

Parties Honor Mrs. Barnett, Miss Farrington

Miss Beverly Farrington has chosen August 1 for her marriage to Maj. Hugh Richardson, USA, so her pre-wedding festivities are coming thick and fast. Yesterday she was given a luncheon by her future sister-in-law, Miss Annie Laurie Richardson, at the Army and Navy Country Club.

Mrs. George Barnett celebrated her birthday anniversary in the country at Wakefield Manor, her home near Front Royal, Va. yesterday. Members of her family on hand included Mrs. Newbold Noyes, Peter Dickey, and Mrs. Basil Gordon.

The birthday anniversary of Emperor Haile Selassie was celebrated quietly yesterday by the Ambassador of Ethiopia and Mme. Imru at the embassy with members of the embassy staff and their wives.

Miss Genevieve Reynolds, newly appointed assistant press attache at our embassy in Rio, is now in New York, whence she will sail on Thursday on the S. S. Argentina for her new post. Mr. and Mrs. Forney Rankin were recent hosts at a cocktail party in honor of Miss Reynolds, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Oram entertained for her at cocktails on Saturday.

In Your Sorrow

Your sorrow is a tragedy . . .
That nothing can erase . . . And there is no one on this earth . . .
To take your dear one's place
. . . And I can only offer you . . .
My sympathtic prayer . . . That God will keep the one you loved
. . . In His eternal care . . . But I assure you truly that . . . My heart goes out to you . . . And there is nothing for your sake
. . . I would not gladly do . . . I hope that you will call on me
. . . Tomorrow or today . . . That I may serve your slightest need
. . . In every friendly way . .
Because I want to ease your pain . . . And brighten every dawn . . . And by each little word and deed . . . To help you carry on.

Anne Suggests Golden Fruit Punch For 50th Wedding Celebration, Or Informal Summer Entertaining

REQUESTS for recipes for cooling punch come often nowadays, especially from readers planning large scale entertaining. Here are two, for two different types of punch, and the recipes:

DEAR ANNE:

Will you please give me the amounts of fruit juices, ginger ale or sparkling water to make punch to serve 100. I'd prefer one without a tea base. This is for a golden wedding anniversary. Would you suggest something to serve with it? We want it simple. We are having open house from 3 to 5 p. m., with the possibility of 200 or more guests.

J. W. C., Arlington.

This would be a nice punch for the golden wedding celebration because of its color.

GINGERALE FRUIT PUNCH

3 quarts lemon juice
3 quarts orange juice
3 gallons water
6 pounds sugar
2 quarts pineapple juice
4 quarts gingerale.

Mix all the ingredients except gingerale thoroughly. Chill. Just before serving, add the gingerale. This makes 5 gallons of punch. Lime or lemon ice can be added just before serving if desired.

Do you plan to have a wedding cake? You might have one iced in yellow, or a white one with gold or yellow decorations. Mints in white and gold and toasted nuts could be added to the light refreshments. You might have assorted cookies too, to augment the wedding cake.

DEAR ANNE:

Can you give me a recipe for a mixed fruit juice punch without liquor and the amount I should make for about 100 guests.

A. R., Hyattsville, Md.

FRUIT PUNCH

6 quarts orange juice
2 pints lemon juice
2 pints grapefruit juice
7 to 8 pounds sugar
Enough ice water to make 5 gallons punch.

Mix well, being sure to stir until sugar is all dissolved. Slices of orange and maraschino cherries can be floated in the punch bowl as a garnish if desired.

DEAR ANNE:

Daughter accidentally spilled nail polish on brand new sewing machine cabinet and promptly removed same with nail polish remover. It has marred the finish. How can I restore it to natural finish without doing the whole top?

Mrs. C. B. H., Midway Park, N. C.

You may be able to smooth the spot by rubbing with a cloth dipped first in linseed oil, then in powdered pumice stone. If more drastic measures are required, try this:

Rub the spot carefully with fine steel wool (size 0) until the marred portion is removed. Brush thoroughly with small brush to remove scrapings. Let dry. With a fine paint brush, apply a very thin coating of clear shellac. Let dry. Apply additional coats of shellac in this way till indentation is filled and desired color obtained. Rub top smooth with the pumice and linseed oil.

DEAR ANNE:

Does dry cleaning remove perspiration? I have a summer silk dress that I hesitate to wash. Yet it became perspiration-soaked on a hot day and I'm afraid dry cleaning will not freshen it sufficiently and remove the odor.

W. W. K., Washington.

Dry cleaning does not entirely remove perspiration. It does take out the oily part of it, we are told by the National Institute of Cleaning and Dyeing, and it removes the bacteria, skin scales and soil. Regular dry cleaning of garments that are not badly stained by perspiration will keep them fresh.

However, salt crystals on the surface of the fabric left by the evaporation of the water of perspiration can only be removed with moisture. Your dry cleaner can get them out by spotting. Many cleaners spray the underarm area of garments with a fine spray of moisture, then dry them quickly to prevent formation of dye or sizing rings. If large areas of a garment are stained with perspiration, however, it must be wet cleaned.

I'd advise you to go ahead and try the dry cleaning before you take the risk of laundering the dress. It may prove perfectly satisfactory if the cleaner gives special attention to perspiration soaked areas.

DEAR ANNE:

I am very anxious to obtain four salad forks in "Splendor," a pattern now inactive. Can you suggest where I might be able to find them?

Mrs. H. V. P., Mount Rainier, Md.

One firm specializing in old silver patterns is Julius Goodman & Son, Memphis. I've just had a letter from this concern in which they say they carry more than 500 patterns in stock, some dating as far back as 100 years. They send silver to customers on approval and also take incomplete or inactive patterns in exchange on a purchase of new and active patterns.

Anne answers questions through her column only. Address letters to "Anne," Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Names and addresses of questioners will be used, unless specifically requested otherwise.

Novelty Gifts More Devilish Than Ever, Exhibit Discloses

The Washington Post

IT'S A GIFT—Using a barbecue pan as a mirror, Mrs. Kay Weber, 4002 Queensbury rd., Hyattsville, Md., powders her face at the Washington Gift Show. Mrs. Weber's special barbecue attire and the pan are on display at the show, which opened yesterday

Alas! Alas! And tch, tch, too! Once upon a time it was a snap to be the life of the party. Play a harmonica, use a special toothpaste, or give hotfoots, maybe.

That crude old art is getting complicated. Some of the props featured in the mammoth gift show that opened yesterday at the Willard Hotel would keep a poor old harmonica player blowing hard to stay in the game.

There are those cute little glass ice cubes with assorted bugs imbedded within. Really adds something to a well-mixed highball. The exhibitor thinks so, anyway.

Think of the old fashioned hot-footer competing with the tall highball glass that has invisible slits in its patterns. When the glass is tipped, the liquid spills all over the drinker's chest. This one is guaranteed to get a reaction.

Then there is the copper-colored hula girl with the illuminated anatomy. And the wow of a bartender's apron with pockets specially marked for bicarbonate of soda and broken dishes. And the false teeth that clack when they're wound up. Very lifelike, even without a face.

Spread over three floors of the Willard, the show gives the Washington gift trade a look at the newest in china, leather goods, incidental furniture, metalware and stationware.

There is a line of china that sounds musical notes when struck (gently), and another line featuring about 25 cattle brands on utensils, dishes, linen and the chef's cap. ("Everybody goes for cowboys nowadays," the exhibitor explained.)

The show, open until Thursday, is for the trade only.

NLRB Rules Hiring Halls Can Be Legal

By The Associated Press

The National Labor Relations Board ruled yesterday that a union hiring hall can be lawful even though hiring preference is given to men who have worked for the employers in the recent past.

In a 3-1 decision the board held that the CIO Marine Cooks and Stewards Union had not refused to bargain in good faith when it demanded on Aug. 31, 1948, that Pacific Coast shipowners agree to such hiring halls.

This was the first time the board had accepted any kind of hiring hall as legal under the Taft-Hartley Act. The decision is considered an important one for the maritime industry and other industries where unions furnish new employes through hiring halls.

At the same time the board ruled unanimously that the contract finally adopted on December 2, 1948, after a strike, was unlawful because it kept the old hiring hall clause, which explicitly gave hiring preference to union members.

The Taft-Hartley Act forbids discrimination either for or against union members. The board ordered the cooks and stewards to quit giving effect to this contract, and the case may land in the Federal courts for settlement.

But there was nothing new in the board's opinion that a hiring hall violates the law if it gives an advantage to union men. The Supreme Court already has refused to overturn such an NLRB ruling. The other part of today's decision had greater implications for the future.

Here are the provisions of the hiring hall clause that the union proposed on August 31, 1948:

The union would furnish all new personnel (in certain classifications) required by the ship owners. Preference would be given to men who had worked "within the past two years" for the companies signing the contract, and men "who presently are employed" on vessels operated by the companies.

Big Names Mark Night At Watergate

By Paul Hume

Some of Washington's biggest musical names took over the Watergate concert last night.

Howard Mitchell and Paul Callaway conducted, with Evelyn Swarthout, pianist, Jacob Barkin, tenor, and the Sesquicentennial Chorus. It was a good showing for "Washington Night" in the Sesqui season.

Mitchell's return to the summer concerts, after two weeks of guest conductors, was marked by a Bach chorale and Haydn's last symphony. With airplanes flying over at the rate of one every five minutes through the first half of the concert, Mitchell adopted a plan he used successfully several weeks ago.

When a plane came directly overhead, he paused at a lull in the music; then, when the noise passed, resumed without a break. It's a help but it can't always be used, and the music sometimes suffers. It suffers from the planes, too. What's the answer?

The Haydn moved with elegant vitality—qualities it must always have to succeed. Cantor Barkin won a long ovation after his fine singing of arias from Mendelssohn's Elijah, and Ponchielli's Gioconda. He responded with "Rachem"—a traditional Hebrew melody.

Post-intermission time went to the first appearance of the full Sesqui Chorus at these concerts. Callaway directed Leo Sowerby's Canticle of the Sun, Constant Lambert's Rio Grande, and "Sing We Merrily Unto God," by Cecil Effinger.

Evelyn Swarthout played the spots off Lambert's brilliant solo part in the Rio Grande.

It was a stimulating, if trying, evening.

Friday night: the all-Gershwin program.

APPROVED FOR VETERAN FINANCING

This Early American style home is well located in a quiet section of Kensington. It includes three well-lighted bedrooms, bath, large dining room and a long, comfortable living room with brick fireplace. The kitchen is spacious and has a large pantry and a closed-in service porch. The lot is 100 by 133 feet, is landscaped with well-kept grass and healthy shrubbery and trees. Features of this house include a large attic, stairway to the second floor from the pantry, full site screens and storm windows, double hardwood floors, basement toilet, garage and a novel summer house on the rear of the lot. This house was built by our construction superintendent for his own use and it is in superb condition. You will seldom have an opportunity to buy a home of this type.

THINK FIRST
About this beautiful brick bungalow: has very unusual lines and features not found in the most expensive homes, such as mercury switches, concealed lighting, complete electric kitchen with dishwasher, washing machine, electric stove, built-in and concealed bar, huge bedrooms, double closet with sliding doors, built-in garage and 10-ft. basement. A separate 2-bedroom brick house that is so nice it will always be rented for the $75 necessary to make your payments and it goes with the house. A bargain at $22,000. You name the terms. No. 398.

'How to Stop Killing Yourself'

Laziness Can Be a Safety Valve

EDITOR'S NOTE: Many of us are unconsciously killing ourselves in our own fashion, says Dr. Steincrohn. This is the second in a series of articles, in which he describes some of the subtle forms of suicide, and tells how to avoid them.

The series is condensed from the book, "How to Stop Killing Yourself", just published by Wilfred Funk, Inc.

Dr. Steincrohn is a specialist in internal medicine with 25 years of practice, and a former vice president of the Connecticut State Medical Society.

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M. D.

CHAPTER TWO

The late Dr. Raymond Pearl of Johns Hopkins came to this conclusion after studying everything from flies to men:

Overwork shortens life.

It has long been my belief that laziness is a safety valve. All of us, in varying degrees, are lazy at times.

"Just how do you keep looking so young?" Hedda Hopper asked Gary Cooper.

"Well, Hedda," he said, "I'll tell you. When I get up in the morning, I look around the place to see if there's any heavy work to be done. If I find any, I walk quietly away from it, get off in some corner, and shine two or three pairs of shoes."

If the most ambitious of us did not suffer laziness and fatigue, or whatever one wishes to call it, we would work ourselves to death prematurely.

A Pace That Kills

I know a man of 40 with a sick wife and four children. He works in a factory eight hours a day; another eight hours are spent as assistant on a delivery truck.

He has driven himself this way for two years. He has had no vacations or daily relaxation. He is too tired to read or enjoy an occasional movie.

You couldn't advise such a man to give up one of his jobs. You couldn't say to him, "This pace will kill you in a year or two." You couldn't—or you wouldn't—simply because the man is being normal. He is reacting as any head of the family should whose family was in danger.

There are numerous individuals at the opposite pole of existence. Money, materials, securities are not their problems. How to escape from life—and yet continue to live—is the problem for many of them.

I know a successful businessman who is a failure as a father and a husband.

His wife does not love him; his children fear him for his overbearing manner, lack of humor, and lack of interest in them. He has unconsciously gone about killing himself, and them, for years.

If you ask him why he is unhappy, his finger will point at them and never toward himself. They have no understanding of him, he says. He is a stranger in his own family.

What is his solution for this unbearable situation? First, what might he do other than overwork? Take extended vacations alone? He tried it once. Having taken time off for a month in the South, he returned after four days because of a nagging guilt. Unconsciously he had felt that he had let his family down. Returning, he was as difficult as ever to please.

Dollars May Not Help

One person works hard because he doesn't know where the next dollar is coming from. The other because he has a mixture of too many dollars and too many troubles.

Somehow dollars are not antidotes, in themselves, for doldrums. Sometimes they make things seem more futile.

Normally, only a genius can escape in work. He is not engulfed; he dominates his medium.

Were the driving forces behind Michelangelo and Edison powered by neurotic urges to escape life?

With such giants it is safe to assume they were facing head on what they wanted to do. They were not working hard because they were running away from themselves.

Study your own family. Study your own friends. Which of them has time to putter around and enjoy life, and which of them is continually on the job?

Work May Be An Escape

There is an excuse for overwork, perhaps, when the work is absorbing. When it is unimaginative and deadening, there can be only one reason: escape.

If you have been warned against overwork; if you have been told you are killing yourself; if your wife and friends have begged you to lighten your daily burden; take your bearings.

Either you are an Edison—and chances are you are not—or you're just a little man not adjusted to his environment.

Ask yourself:

(a) Am I working too many hours? If so, why?

(b) Do I really like my work, or is it an escape?

(c) Am I too ambitious? Am I losing the present for the future?

Define your position. If it adds up to the tension of overwork, better begin easing that tension today.

One of the essentials of the happy life is the proper mixture of work and relaxation.

What to do? Don't allow the clock to bedevil you. Learn to relax. Fill your leisure time with pleasurable activities. Less of tension and more of living are efficient antidotes against slow suicide.

Here's Radio Station Run Like Newspaper

By John Crosby

NINE years ago, the Bridgeport Times-Star sold out to its competitors, the evening Post and morning Telegram, and Bridgeport became a town whose newspapers were under the same management. It's a situation that afflicts a good many cities but it nettled the Times-Star's former publisher, Victor W. Knauth. "I think monopoly is very bad for people," says Knauth. "Even if they're good newspapers the readers get only one point of view."

CROSBY

Knauth brooded about the monopoly newspaper situation for years without getting anywhere. "You can't start a newspaper against an established one. To do it, you'd have to be prepared to lose $2,000,000. The alternative: a radio station. He points out that, conditions being aqual, it would cost $600,000 to maintain a newspaper in a sizable city where he can run a radio station for about $80,000.

The result is station WAVZ in New Haven, which Knauth in partnership with another former newsman, Daniel W. Kops, bought a year ago, and which may be the only radio station in the country operated like a newspaper. WAVZ broadcasts five half-hour news periods a day and handles them just like a newspaper even to the extent of labeling them Page One, Page Two, First Edition and Noon Edition. The station also has a Society Page, Sports Page and Editorial Page.

All Ex-Newspapermen

WAVZ HAS a staff of six reporters, all former newspapermen, each equipped with a battery-driven tape recording machine. They cover the local news much like the newspapers and slap stories on the air the minute they have anything to tell. "It's quite a job," Knauth admits, "converting newspaper men into radio men and vice versa. Radio announcers have to interrupt their spiel for a bulletin. They can't see any excuse for it. And newspapermen keep thinking in terms of editions. It's very hard to get them to phone a story right in or bring it right in. They keep thinking in terms of deadlines."

Tape is used almost entirely to get the story in the direct words of the participants. Knauth says it's safer (no unexpected cuss words, for one thing) and also it "has the closest emotional connection with people I ever saw."

WAVZ was one of the first radio stations to follow up the Federal Communications Commission's relaxation of its ban on editorializing. "We only have editorials when we're burned up about something," he says. "The first editorial that got any real attention was in the mayoralty campaign last year. We came out for the Democratic candidate. He lost by 700 out of 70,000.

"Then we raised hell with (Governor) Bowles for appointing Benton to the Senate. We've had two editorials about Korea—the first hoping that Truman would stand up to it, the second praising him for having done so."

'Independent Democrat'

NEW HAVEN'S two newspapers, jointly owned, the morning Journal-Courier and the evening Register, are independent with Republican leanings. Knauth says his radio station might be described as Independent Democrat, though it takes the Democrats to task too.

Politics once got the station into hot water. After WAVZ had plumped for the Democratic candidate for mayor, the Republicans bought time for a recorded speech by the Republican mayor. The record got scratched and the mayor wound up a stirring address with the words: "And therefore, I urge you to vote for the Repub, the Repub, the Repub . . ." Later, WAVZ played the record over the air four times without mishap for nothing to make up for it, but it nas not yet succeeded entirely in erasing the suspicion that it was attempting deliberately to sabotage the Republicans.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

And It Would Probably Be a Cowboy Picture

Dick Coe's Sunday column made me an interesting offer.

Dick said if Sourpuss Gold doesn't think we've had a lot of good movies this year, he'd invite me to see any one of 14 with a money-back guarantee. He also offered to repay any baby sitter fees.

I must decline this offer with thanks. I've seen most of the pictures he named, and liked them. Not enough to take space away from stray kittens to print recommendations for them, but I liked them pretty well.

Another reason for refusing the offer is that I can't make an honest penny on those rebated sitter fees. Our "baby" hasn't had a sitter in almost 10 years.

As a matter of fact, I'm afraid that if we hired one for him he'd probably take her to the movies, too.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Extremely affectionate kittens; will deliver in Silver Spring." (SLigo 1727.)

"One-year-old female cat and two female kittens." (TAylor 8755.)

"Nine lovely, housebroken kittens; will deliver." (TEmple 2404 after 6 p. m.)

"Five cute, playful, housebroken tiger kittens, 6 weeks old." (OLiver 6214.)

"Gentle, good-looking 1-year-old collie mongrel with pleasant grin needs room to roam." (ROckville 4508.)

"Three 3-month-old pups, bull and terrier." (JOhnson 8-5927.)

"Three lovely, playful kittens." (HUdson 5815 before 9 a. m. or after 5 p. m.)

"All-black mother cat and four 6-week-old kittens." (OLliver 9888.)

"Three beautiful, blue eyed black kittens, 6 weeks old, half-Siamese." (DEcatur 9386.)

"Black half-Siamese 7-month-old brother and sister cats; prefer to keep them together." (SLigo 0580.)

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

It seems to me that visitors to the Nation's Capital should be greeted with more hospitality than is show by the Women's Room at Union Station.

There are no free towels there—just a sign saying you can get one from the matron for 5 cents.

Majorie Beck,
Garrett Park, Md.

Dear Marjorie:

Some railroad terminals supply both free paper towels and 5-cent cloth towels. Some do not.

Edward W. Flounders, the new stationmaster here in Washington, says the terminal encounters a heavy expense in maintaining the rest rooms at Union Station, and doesn't think it is justified in adding to the expense by providing free towels.

After all, it's a business enterprise, and somebody has got to "pay the freight." In any business, so-called "free" services have to be covered by increased revenues elsewhere—and nobody wants higher fares.

Incidentally, Stationmaster Flounders came here last month from Wilmington, Del., where he was a railroader for 34 years. He thinks Washington people are simply wonderful, and says that although he hasn't been at the game long, he may decide to stick to railroading permanently. Bill.

BIKE RIDER'S PLEDGE

S. J. Butcher of Falls Church, Va., calls our attention to the constructive work being done with young bike riders in Fairfax County.

Sergt. Lewis H. Shumate, director of the Fairfax Police Bicycle Safety Club, gives lectures and chalk talks on home, school and highway safety, and encourages the small fry to join up and sign this pledge:

"I will ride in the same direction as automobiles, and keep well to the right side of the road. I will ride in a straight line, and not weave or stunt. I will ride single file, and never carry a passenger. I will stop for red lights and stop signs and will obey all other traffic laws. I will have lights both on the front and rear of my bike when riding at night. I will keep my bike in good mechanical condition at all times. I will not ride on the sidewalks."

That's a pretty good course of conduct for all bicycle enthusiasts. Even if you don't live in Fairfax County, it might be a good idea to clip that pledge, and review it occasionally—just to see if you're living up to it.

HERE WE GO AGAIN

The war news is thronging our stores with people intent on laying in big stocks of things they don't need. Ruth H. Lane of 619 N. Jefferson st., Arlington, Va., wouldn't exactly call them crazy, but suggests we might call them "hoarderline" cases.

CLUB NEWS

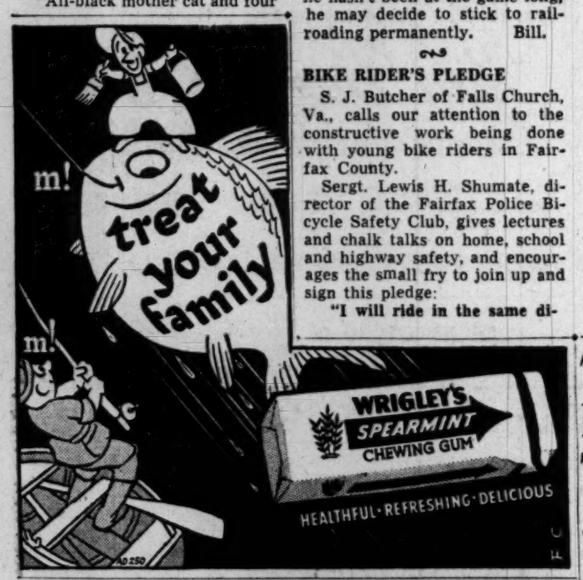
The District Line Club will meet outdoors again tomorrow night. District Liners are invited to meet at 8:15 p. m. Tuesday at the 16th st. entrance to Walter Reed, and bring their own hot dogs, potato salad, marshmallows, etc. Transportation to Rock Creek Park will be provided for those who need it. If it looks like rain, or you want further details, call Kathleen Chaimas (Hudson 6038) or Maxine Boyd (Axminster 6307). You're all welcome.

UNHAPPY ENDING?

Jim Wilfrong is intrigued by the recent classified ad that offered: "Thoroughbred filly, 4 years old, well bred but raced unplaced this season; reasonable." Muses Jim: "You could run that under the caption: 'Short Short Story.'"

PUN FUN

Ed Schmerler of 4615 DeRussey pkwy., Chevy Chase, Md., observes that Griff doesn't mind if his Cuban pitchers can't speak much English, just so they know how to put a little on that baseball.



733 Blood Donors Give To Red Cross

The Red Cross Regional Blood Center, 1730 E st. nw., last week distributed 733 pints of blood to hospitals in the District and communities covered by the Bloodmobile in Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia.

In the District 428 pints of blood were distributed, 123 in Maryland, 152 in Virginia, and 30 in West Virginia.

The Bloodmobile is scheduled to make three visits this week:

Hagerstown, Md., at St. John's Parish Church, Monday, from noon to 7 p. m.; Alexandria, Va., at Gadsby's Tavern, 401 Cameron st., Tuesday, 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.; Bolling Air Force Base, in the gymnasium, Friday, 8:30 a. m. to 4 p. m.

Dr. Fabrizio Heads Dental Society's Postgrad Clinic

Dr. Francis J. Fabrizio, Washington dentist and member of the faculty of the Georgetown University Dental School, has been appointed general chairman of the D. C. Dental Society's 1951 Postgraduate clinic.

Dr. Fabrizio

A graduate of Georgetown, Dr. Fabrizio is a former editor of the D. C. Dental Society Journal, and has previously served as vice chairman of the postgraduate clinic. He lives at 15 Carvel rd., Westmoreland Hills, Md.

The clinic—the nineteenth sponsored by the society—is scheduled for March 11-14 at the Shoreham Hotel. More than 3000 dentists from all over the country are expected to attend.

President Needs All Help in Crisis

By Drew Pearson

The other night on the radio, as I listened to President Truman telling the Nation about the Korean war, I couldn't help comparing his broadcast to FDR's during the war. One gave you the impression of the master at the helm; the other of a sincere, somewhat inadequate little guy who was trying to do his best.

Pearson

I have also been reading the "letters from readers" in the Washington newspapers of late, and noted the very large amount of misunderstanding, criticism, and opposition to war in Korea.

Perhaps the President read these letters too. Perhaps they helped induce him—three weeks late—to tell the American people about the fundamental issues of the war. In contrast, I recall that President Roosevelt went on the air immediately after Pearl Harbor and immediately after other grave crises—because he knew that it was so all-important to keep the American people informed and to have their support.

Obviously, Truman must feel the same way; but he both forgets about it and lacks the polished touch and sure-fire know-how of his predecessor.

So I couldn't help thinking, as I listened to Truman's sincere, high-pitched, and somewhat belated explanation to the American people, that what more Americans need to do, instead of carping and criticizing, is to pitch in and help out.

Complaints About FDR

When FDR was in the White House, a lot of people complained that we were too centralized, that we got in the habit of leaving everything to the Government; and that it was a bad thing to have a masterful man with a bewitching voice in the White House for such a long time. It destroyed our initiative, they claimed, prepared us for dictatorship.

I suspect that it's some of this same crowd who are now griping about Truman. However, the current crisis presents a situation where, if they are sincere, they can put their previous ideas to work.

In brief, Truman needs help and needs it badly. Whether he needs it because of his own inadequacies or because the country faces a serious emergency, is not worth arguing about. When a man is drowning, you don't stop to ask how he fell in the water. You pull him out.

I am glad to report that many Americans are now pulling first and asking questions afterward.

Take, for instance, the Junior Chamber of Commerce, a live-wire bunch of youngsters who saw service in the last war, and who know what it's all about. They have already started hatching a plan to help out their country—and Truman—in regard to one of the most vital of all problems; helping prospective soldiers to know what the shooting is all about.

The Jaycees are working on a plan whereby they would invite draftees and prospective enlisted men around to a smoker where they would tell the new soldiers something about their own experiences in the late war, give them a few tips on how to get ahead in the Army or Navy, and, above all, help them see the objectives behind the war—which can make this world a better place to live in.

The Jaycees mean business. And their approach makes sense.

Where Wars Begin

Another thing to remember, however, is that most people fail to understand when and where war begins.

If you asked the average person when our participation in World War II began he would tell you at Pearl Harbor. But that isn't true. Actually it began when the Jap warlords invaded Manchuria on September 18, 1931—10 years before Pearl Harbor.

Historians undoubtedly will tell us that World War III really began when Russia grabbed off Romania, Bulgaria, Poland, Hungary, and Czechoslovakia.

Korea was just one of those segments. Actually it is not an isolated battlefield 8000 miles away, but a part of the Kremlin's carefully laid scheme for segment war.

Sooner or later in this carefully plotted segment plan of warfare, the free nations had come to the point where they could not retreat any more. And I think Harry Truman deserves credit rather than blame when he recognized this fact. He could have waited for a Pearl Harbor, as FDR did. But the Kremlin, being a lot smarter than Hitler, probably would not have given us a Pearl Harbor until they were ready to make their blow so severe that it would have knocked us out altogether.

Mr. Truman happens to have given rather wide publicity to his views about me, so that wherever I go in any part of the world, folks seem to know of it and remind me of it. However, regardless of personal feelings, he's our President—my President.

We can't abdicate our American citizenship. And while I am not abdicating my right to point out Harry's mistakes, nevertheless, I hope in one or two future columns to make a small contribution as a citizen to Harry's tough job of keeping the American public informed on some of the real issues behind this Korean crisis.

Kalorama Heights

. . . Section of Washington on the heights above Rock Creek Park, bisected by Connecticut Avenue.

Kalorama—the Greek equivalent for Fine View—has a long and interesting history. "Widow's Mite" was the name held by the area as far back as 1664. In more recent times four Presidents of the United States have lived in Kalorama—Taft, Wilson, Harding and Hoover.

On the subject of Presidents, James A. Garfield was in office when our Association began. In the ensuing years this Association has helped finance sufficient homes to form a sizable city of its own.

District YWCA Board of Directors Reviews Summer Camp Program . . . and Hecht Co. Fashions

Bravos for the fine work of Board Members for The YWCA's Kamp Kahlert on West River, Maryland! Enthusiasm ran rampant at a recent meeting reviewing their program. Now in its 28th season, this summer camp is but one phase of the many activities of the thirty-seven member Board of Directors wholly responsible for conducting all of the business in the ever-growing YWCA of the District of Columbia. Applause, too, greeted Washington's popular Virginia Baker for her flattering ensembles from The Hecht Co. Like so many on-the-go Washingtonians, the vivacious Virginia looks to the Fashion Floor of this great store in the Nation's Capital for charming costumes for important social functions.

Listening to the varied agenda of YWCA activities, from the Health Education Department's swimming pool to classes in French or Dressmaking, are (left to right): Mrs. Seth R. Brooks, Recording Secretary; Mrs. Leonard Elstad, President, YWCA; Miss Mabel R. Cook, Executive Director, and Mrs. F. M. Rogers (Virginia Baker).

FOR THE GIRL who can't go away to camp, the YWCA has Camp Stay-at-Home where 100 girls per season gather three days a week for swimming, music, dramatics, crafts, etc. Left to right: Mrs. Seth R. Brooks, Mrs. W. O. Mishoff, chairman, Camp Stay-at-Home Committee; Virginia Baker (Mrs. F. M. Rogers), wearing The Hecht Co.'s swirl-skirt, lace-edged black rayon crepe frock at 39.95, and Mrs. Arthur H. Kruse, chairman, Kamp Kahlert Committee.

THE YOUNG ADULT DEPARTMENT in the YWCA Penthouse offers a varied program to young working men and women, as does the Teen-Age Department, where younger girls participate in an agenda covering public affairs, personality development, etc. Left to right: Mrs. Arthur H. Kruse; Mrs. Angus Dun, 2nd Vice President, YWCA; Virginia Baker (Mrs. F. M. Rogers), wearing The Hecht Co.'s rayon-satin-touched black dress at 17.95; and Mrs. Willard O. Mishoff.
